'FINAL OFFER' SENT BY U.K. TO SMITH

LONDON (AP)—The British government today approved a "final offer" to Premier Ian Smith, giving him six weeks to end the Rhodesian rebellion or face harsh compulsory sanctions under the United Nations.

Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden told reporters after a British cabinet meeting that Sir Morrice James, a high official of the Comommwealth relations office, will fly to Salisbury tonight with the government's minimum terms for a settlement.

Rail Union Shrugs Off Sell Threats

Striking Pacific Great Eastern Railway workers today shrugged off "threats" the line would be sold as old hat and countered they wanted a face-to-face meeting with the threateners for some serious negotiating.

Fred Richmond, chairman of the five-union federation of PGE employees which pulled its 400 non-operating tradesmen off the line 18 days ago, said the union never has asked more than the 50-cents-hourly wage increase spread over two years as recommended by a conciliation board and offered by management.

He said the union struck to obtain government acceptance of the new principle proposed by conciliation chairman Les Bewley, a Vancouver magistrate, that PGE tradesmen not be tied to their counterparts in the national railways but be compared with other B.C tradesmen.

FRINGE BENEFITS

"Our committee met this morning and decided to ask for face-to-face meetings at the top level — Bennett, Gunderson and Williston — for serious and earnest negotiations on the fringe benefits proposed in the Bewley report," Mr. Richmond said.

"This top management has never negotiated with us. We've just had Joe Broadbent (PGE general-manager) on the other side of the table and it's obvious he has no power to make decisions."

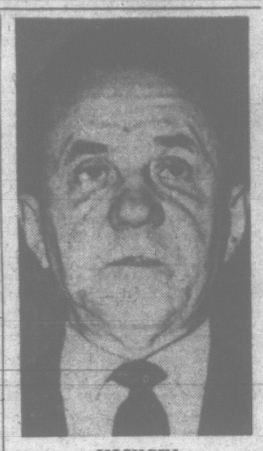

The union planned to transmit its proposal later today but at press time there was an unconfirmed report that Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, in Vancouver, had met a union spokesman and had given an undertaking to set up a meeting between the top union and management representatives.

Mr. Richmond said suggestions by Premier Bennett, PGE president, and directors Elnar Gunderson and Forests Minister Williston Wednesday that the PGE might have to be sold by the province if the strike continues were just manoeuvres by the management.

"These threats were made before at the bargaining table. We didn't take them seriously then and we don't take them seriously now. Who would buy a rail line that was tied up by a strike?"

He said a suggestion by Mr. Williston that the federation was acting as a secret tool of the

KOSYGIN

RUSSIA SAYS:

Chinese Prevent Red Win

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin charged today that China has prevented world communism from putting "a quick end" to United States military actions in Viet Nam.

Speaking to a Soviet - Polish friendship meeting in Sverdlovsk in the Urals, Kosygin said:

"Had American imperialism encountered the joint rebuff of all countries of socialism . . . it is doubtless that a quick end would have been put to its outrages in Viet Nam.

"China's position has become a serious obstacle in the struggle for this sacred cause."

Kosygin disputed claims by Peking that the Russians were helping U.S. policy in Viet Nam and giving Hanoi only half-hearted support.

BOASTS OF STRENGTH

Boasting of Soviet economic strength, Kosygin said the nation had "a big harvest" this year "and the output of animal husbandry has sharply increased."

Western sources said economic strength was a major factor in Soviet ability to provide large amounts of military and economic aid to countries such as North Viet Nam in moves to win over their allegiance in the feud with Peking.

Soviet-Chinese relations have steadily worsened in the last two months.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda today called the cultural revolution "a political purge."

SEE EXPULSION MOVE

In Washington Kosygin's slashing attack on China was viewed as evidence that the Soviet leadership would like to read the Chinese Communists entirely out of the Soviet-led world Communist movement.

Washington experts considered it significant that Kosygin made his sensational charges on the occasion of a top-level Polish visit to the Soviet Union. Poland's support would be important. Generally Eastern European Communist countries have opposed expulsion of the Chinese from the Soviet - led world Communist movement for two reasons: First, the precedent of extreme denunciation might be used against any one of them at some future time; second, the European Communist countries have used the Sino-Soviet split to gain for themselves more room to manoeuvre.

Airport Loot All In Cash

MONTREAL (CP) — A province-wide manhunt was under way as police of four forces sought thieves who stole $1,000,000 in cash from the mailroom at Montreal International Airport early today.

Montreal district postmaster Hector Cormier said departmental investigators are investigating the possibility of an "inside job".

Police squads raced to a north-end Montreal building nine miles due east of the airport on a tip that some of the mailbags had been found. They said later they had found only one cloth mailbag which did not seem to be connected with the robbery.

The police, from the RCMP, Montreal city and suburban Dorval forces, found the bag at the rear of a house on St. Lawrence Boulevard. Provincial police sent out a province-wide alert but said no description of the daring robbers was immediately available.

A Post Office official said the mailroom at the airport is "difficult to get at" and normally guarded.

"Whoever did the job certainly must have known his way around," said a post office security official, who added there are "some good leads."

The robbery occurred in the airport's mailroom when thieves slashed their way through a heavy wire mesh to steal 15 bags believed to contain bills in various denominations.

RCMP and post office investigators and Dorval police set up roadblocks and were searching all cars leaving the airport.

Post office officials said the amount of the loss probably was "considerable" but an exact accounting could not be made until reports of shipments were obtained from the banks who had sent money through the airport Wednesday night and today.

A Provincial Police spokesman said it was estimated that about $1,000,000 in cash had been taken.

The stolen mailbags were made of heavy leather and each measured 10 by 12 inches. In addition to the 15 small bags weighing 10 pounds each, police said two 30-pound bags probably containing regular mail were taken.

EMPLOYEES ON LUNCH

The theft was believed to have occurred between 4 a.m. and 4:43 a.m. while mailroom employees were on a meal break.

Post office investigators said the mailroom was "difficult to get at and normally was guarded."

It was not immediately known if guards were posted at the time of the robbery.

It was believed that the bags were delivered to the airport Thursday night in an armored car and were destined to be sent to bank branches in various parts of the province today.

Dorval police said money from at least several chartered banks was taken. They did not name the banks.

Tory Ready to Stake Seat On Charge Against Hellyer

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservatives Wednesday called for the resignation of Defence Minister Hellyer charging that he tampered with a report by Rear-Admiral William Landymore.

The charge was made by Terrence Nugent (PC—Edmonton, Strathcona) who said he was prepared to stake his seat on its accuracy.

He said in the House of Commons that the minister tampered with testimony prepared for the defence committee by Landymore, who was later dismissed from service.

Mr. Hellyer described the accusations as a "slanderous insinuation."

Outside the Commons, he told reporters he thought the move was "just an attempt on the part of some desperate people to try to smear my reputation."

He repeated that some changes had been made in Admiral Landymore's testimony but said there was no evidence at the time that the admiral was anything but pleased with the result.

Asked if he thought Admiral Landymore was aligning himself with the Conservatives, Mr. Hellyer replied:

"Yes, there's a very close relationship between the admiral and others and the Conservative party in a desperate attempt to destroy me. . . ."

MOTION DISALLOWED

Inside the Commons, Mr. Nugent's motion to charge the minister with breach of privileges was disallowed by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, but the opposition continued to press the attack.

After more than two hours of charges and procedural wrangling, the hassle was still not over. Continued debate today seemed likely after the Speaker suggested that Mr. Nugent meet him to discuss a rephrased motion.

NUGENT

Mr. Nugent said he had obtained a sworn affidavit from Admiral Landymore saying his testimony was altered during the time it was in Mr. Hellyer's office before the committee sitting.

The debate brought out some cutting language directed at Mr. Hellyer.

"Lied to the House," Lloyd R. Crouse (PC — Queens - Lunenburg) interjected at one point.

"Another Profumo," added Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) in a reference to the British war minister who resigned after admitting that he had lied to the House about his relationship with playgirl Christine Keeler.

Mr. Nugent's first motion was ruled out by the Speaker on the grounds that his case did not meet House rules about raising his point at the earlier opportunity.

The question of Admiral Landymore's testimony before the Commons defence committee last June had been raised before, the Speaker said.

Mr. Nugent said he had obtained a sworn statement from Admiral Landymore only during the weekend. He had presented his point of privilege Wednesday after a careful investigation and with due regard to the seriousness of the matter.

Mr. Nugent said he had an affidavit from Admiral Landymore that the admiral had gone to Mr. Hellyer's office before his committee appearance. He gave his brief orally and was asked to leave a copy with the defence minister.

The brief later was returned to the admiral with four pages deleted and two others substituted, Mr. Nugent said.

DIDN'T CONSENT

Admiral Landymore hadn't consented to the changes in his brief, which dealt with the personnel situation in the Maritime Command, Mr. Nugent said.

When Admiral Landymore was fired last July, Mr. Hellyer said the text of the admiral's presentation to the defence committee had been altered. This was because he had tried to bring before the committee matters outside his authority—personnel figures in the Maritime Command he headed.

This became a key issue in the debate when Mr. Hellyer demanded that Mr. Nugent in-

ALL TESTIMONY 'NOW IN DOUBT'

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative Terry Nugent said in the Commons today the testimony of every witness to the summer sessions of the defence committee must be in "very serious doubt."

The MP for Edmonton-Strathcona said all these witnesses, including Rear-Admiral William Landymore, should be called before the Commons privileges committee to testify on his charge that Defence Minister Hellyer "tampered" with the evidence of the admiral.

The privileges committee should look into the practices and procedures governing testimony by witnesses so that government officials would understand the limitations of ministerial authority.

At the House opening today, Mr. Nugent said Mr. Hellyer's accusation that his charge is spurious impugns his honor and integrity.

EBAN
. . . blames Syria

Mid-East Feud Taken To UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The threat of a new Middle East crisis confronted the United Nations today as Israel charged Syria with murders, sabotage and open incitement to war.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban called for an emergency meeting of the Security Council. The 15-nation council was expected to meet Friday.

Israel went to the council after a long series of incidents along the Syrian-Israeli border which the Israelis blame on a sabotage organization based in Syria. Saturday a land mine explosion killed four Israeli policemen and injured two.

The Syrian government has disclaimed responsibility for the raids, which are the work of a group of Palestine Arab refugees, known as el - Assefa (storm) or el-Fatah (conquest). In retaliation, Israeli planes attacked a Syrian engineering project north of the Sea of Galilee in July.

NORTH AMERICA ONLY BUFFER REMAINING

W.H.O. Warns of World Hunger Crisis

ROME (CP)—The world food situation is more precarious now than at any time since the Second World War, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization said in its annual report published today.

The FAO said that in 1965-66 the world population increased by about 70,000,000 people but there was an average of two per cent less food for everyone.

This raised fears that the gap between population and food production would increase and that mankind is moving deeper into its worst hunger crisis.

"Any remaining complacency about the food and agriculture situation must surely have been dispelled by the events of the past years," said Director-General B. R. Sen of India.

"But for good harvests in North America, world production would almost certainly have declined. In fact, in each of the developing regions except the Near East, food production is estimated to have fallen by two per cent in total and four to five per cent on a per-capita basis.

"The poor harvests of 1965-66 are all the more serious since they come, not in the midst of plenty, but after a long period in which production has only barely kept up with the rapidly mounting population.

"When millions of people are already inadequately nourished there is little if any margin against the effects of a bad season."

Until recently, large stocks of grain accumulated since the early 1950s, mainly in North America, provided a cushion against emergencies.

Big shipments of these stocks helped avert disaster in India and other drought - stricken areas during the last year.

But these stocks have dropped to their lowest level in more than a decade, due to shipments to famine areas, big imports by China and Russia and successful efforts by the United States to limit production.

"Thus," Dr. Sen said, "the world food situation is now more precarious than at any time since the period of acute shortage immediately after the Second World War. Because of the depletion of stocks the world has become much more dependent on current production, and hence on weather conditions.

"It is therefore with some anxiety that we wait the outcome of the 1966-67 harvests."

SANDOWN PARK

Analyst's Comments — Friday Entries

By HAL MALONE

FIRST RACE — Cuthbertson gets the task of trying to keep Lees Time on the rail. Her speed makes her a danger. Milord of Kent, Penihawk and Aban shouldn't be far away. It may be significant that Aban broke her maiden from the outside post. Able Lea is the danger late. If Please Papa gets in the plot thickens. . . . ABAN, Penihawk, Milord of Kent.

SECOND RACE—Yes Sam has shown some zip sprinting but he doesn't act as if he wants to go this far. They took Keno Kid to the front last time and he held sway until the stretch. My Imagination gets a long way out of it and needs zestful handling. Centennial Su belongs and Shields hustles them. Chase can handle the trip. If Flying Phillip takes to the distance he should be heard from. In a scramble . . . FLYING PHILLIP, Keno Kid, My Imagination.

THIRD RACE—Nearly everyeverything in here is partial to an off track but a drying out track which seems likely poses problems. Aleja goes from the extreme outside to the rail and it might take a pretty fair horse to head her. Daily Mail and Shodan can ramble and the latter can come from just off the pace. Dark Bug probably will try for good position (and depend on Shields' steering) to get on the board. Highdorn benefits from a speed duel and switches to Trejos who finishes well. . . . ALEJA, Shodan, Highdorn.

FOURTH RACE—Sir Runnymede gets to the races so seldom it's easy to forget that he used to scamp successfully with $5,000 stock. If his wheels hold up, it's goodbye Charlie. Without him Malheur Kitten and Orista would likely argue for the lead, but neither are overburdened with courage in the stretch. Miss Ky Lea's form doesn't show it but she used to like a soft track. Famous Bayboy gets well out of it early but he's got a bold rush. If Lord Highland gets in the frontrunners will known they're in a horse race. . . . SIR RUNNYMEDE, Famous Bayboy, Smoke Call.

FIFTH RACE—Royal Kimbo seems to be coming up to a race. He showed good speed in the slop and hung on better. Hi-Ma-Dan picks up five pounds but still is one to fear. Waraway has fair speed but it's hard to see him drawing clear. Inner Guard has been ineffective but his best puts him right there. Summit Talk belongs, but he's had a heavy schedule. If Abram gets in, look out. He had a few traffic problems in his last and figures to be closer. . . . ROYAL KIMBO, Hi-Ma-Dan, Abram.

SIXTH RACE — Stromaway may have a slight class edge and with two races over the track should be about ready. Some Royal Flush will probably head for the lead; how far he holds it depends on how much pressure he gets. Wallaroo obviously likes it soft but hasn't been out of the barn since his big win a month ago. It may be significant that Milne who has won four on Commander Joe switches to Wallaroo. Rough Road has a look. The main danger from behind is Old Boag. He was flying the last eighth in his most recent. . . . STROMAWAY, Old Boag, Wallaroo.

SEVENTH RACE — We look for a smasher of a speed duel here. Eastern Jewel, Ky Winner and Yankee Mac are all heavyweights in cutting corners. Ky Winner's Derby half in 46.4 was the second fastest half of the meet and he may well turn out to be the best claim of the season. Yankee Mac led Jolly Pop to the stretch which solidifies his credentials as a flyer. If they knock one another off, Nickonaches who sheds five pounds and gets Arnold and Mystic Flash who adds three could capitalize late. Santa Teresa drops three is not altogether an outsider. . . . NICKONACHES, Ky Winner, Yankee Mac.

EIGHTH RACE — Mr. Jack G. could be rough to handle if he's tight but he hasn't raced for two months. Without a Daily Mail to chase we wouldn't be surprised if Surprise Issue led them home. Ronabarb couldn't handle the slop but hooks easier and gets Finley. Cookie Lea rates very close. Arigato belongs but it's asking a lot from the outside. If Never Last gets in she could be a problem . . SURPRISE ISSUE, Ronabarb, Cookie Lea.

Bennett Denies Story On German Investment

Premier Bennett today denied that he called last month's election so that a European industrial cartel would invest $2 billion in B.C. including development of a steel-making complex.

The suggestion was made by well-known Lillooet weekly newspaper publisher Margaret "Ma" Murray in the current edition of her publication.

Mr. Bennett, in an interview in New Burnswick on his return from a European tour, said there is "no truth in any shape or form" to the story.

"There was no such arrangement and no such reason," he said. "Time will show that to be a fact."

Mrs. Murray said her information is based on the finding of one-time German economics professor H. T. Millyard who now lives in Lillooet and still receives German news.

She said the European cartel wanted to base its development here because of hydroelectric power and planned to make the money available through Swiss banks.

But it demanded that the premier call an election so that it would be sure it did not have to contend with a Socialist government during the formative years.

Mrs. Murray said Willy Messerschmit, famed German aircraft designer who recently visited Western Canada including several days in B.C., was the cartel's chief emmissary to Bennett.

The Lillooet publisher claimed that Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Loffmark's visit to Germany last spring and Premier Bennett's post-election trip to Germany and Switzerland bolstered the theory.

She was vague about the way the money would be invested saying only that $600 million would be spent on pre-fabricated buildings and houses, $400 million on the steel plant and the rest split in smaller projects.

. . . PGE FOR SALE?

national railway unions to lever a higher settlement for all was "just plain ridiculous."

Mr. Richmond said the whole point of the strike was to finally divorce PGE workers from automatically being tied to the agreements won by the national unions — the reason the federation was formed two years ago.

He said the federation was so determined to obtain considera-tion as B.C. workers that it would not ask more than the 50-cents boost even if the national unions eventually won a higher amount.

Premier Bennett earlier said the PGE would pay the 50 cents or a national settlement, whichever was higher.

Mr. Richmond said the federation wants to open serious negotiations on the fringe benefit improvements recommended by the Bewley report:

Cumulative sick leave of one day a month up to a maximum of 120 days; equal sharing of the monthly costs of the present health and welfare benefits (employees now pay $6.07 and the railway adds $5.01) and expansion of the benefits; doubling of group life insurance to $3,000; and addition of one statutory holiday to bring the total to eight a year.

The suggestions of selling the line were made with varying degrees of firmness Wednesday.

Mr. Gunderson started it by saying the simplest way to deal with the strike "might be sell the ruddy thing."

BACK-PADDLED

But, after reports that U.S. railways and their unions would like to see such a sale, Mr. Gunderson back-pedalled.

In his second statement, Mr. Gunderson emphasized he was "not advocating the sale of the PGE — it's been a great asset to B.C."

"My point was that if the PGE were sold, the employees would get the same as was paid the workers on other railways."

Mr. Bennett, contacted in New Brunswick, reiterated an appeal that the men return to work and said the Crown company would not change its settlement offer.

Commenting on Mr. Gunderson's sale suggestion, he said:

"I hope it wouldn't have to go that far. I would hate to think so, but it is in the hands of the union."

(The premier only last month confirmed he was still serious about his suggestion that the PGE buy the Canadian National Railway's trunk line from Prince George to Prince Rupert and that he would never sell the PGE because it is the B.C. government's chief instrument for controlling provincial development.)

Mr. Williston said this morning he was "dead serious" in his suggestion that the province might be forced to sell the line.

"That would be a last resort and the last thing I would think of, admittedly, but there is some point beyond which we can't go (in a settlement with employees)."

Two Railway Chiefs Show PGE Interest

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two railway presidents expressed interest today in Premier Bennett's suggested sale of the Pacific Great Eastern railway if a strike by non-operating employees does not end soon.

Ian Sinclair of the Canadian Pacific Railway said in a telephone interview from Montreal:

"If they (the PGE) want to put down a price and send it along, we would look at it and study it."

Asked how interested the CPR would be in buying the PGE, Mr. Sinclair said:

"You don't just buy a railway over the telephone. The CPR has always helped B.C. and will continue to do so.

Paul Budd of the Great Northern Railway said in a telephone interview from St. Paul, Minn.:

"We would take a look at the PGE if the B.C. government is interested in putting up the property for sale."

Mr. Budd said he does not "know the PGE as well as I should," but his people in the field would be able to inform him of the details of the 790-mile line from North Vancouver into the Peace River country.

Laos Joins Trek

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Johnson revealed today he had asked Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma of neutral Laos to use his influence with North Vietnamese Premier Ho Chi Minh to end the Viet Nam war. Johnson and the Laotian leader held a joint news conference after they had met for more than one hour here.

Car Safety Chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. senate commerce committee today approved William Haddon Jr., as first U.S. auto safety chief, but only after he was cautioned that enough safety studies have been made—it is time for action.

Minor Had 5 Beers

Stephen Majorki, 19, of 3114 Alder St., was fined $35 in court today when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor.

He was charged after police found five bottles of beer in his car when they stopped it on Douglas Street Sept. 28. Majorki admitted ownership of the beer.

cluded the word "improperly" in his statement about the minister "tampering" with evidence to go before the committee.

He wanted the matter to go before the defence committee when legislation enabling unification of the forces was presented this fall. If that wouldn't do, then he was willing to have the standing committee on privileges and elections look into it.

". . . I want to clear my name which is more precious to me than anything."

But he wanted the word "tampering" defined because it could mean almost anything, including scratching someone's back.

Mr. Nugent said Commons' rules are clear. They stipulated that tampering with evidence a witness would present before a Commons committee is a breach of MPs' privileges.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) and Gordon Churchill PC—Winnipeg South Centre) backed Mr. Nugent to the hilt.

Mr. Forrestall said he associated himself with Mr. Nugent in the move against Mr. Hellyer. Mr. Churchill said he would move today for a charge against Mr. Hellyer if some way were found to get around the Wednesday conflict of opinion.

H-Bomb Reaction Cancer Cure?

LONDON (Reuters) — A British hospital plans to use a hydrogen bomb-type nuclear reaction in experimental treatment of cancer, it was disclosed today.

Beams of high energy neutrons, produced in a British-developed vacuum tube, will be used at the Christie Hospital in Manchester.

This new radiation device using neutrons has been developed at a defence ministry electronics research laboratory and will be tested to see whether it is more effective than X-rays in treatment of many forms of cancer.

The laboratory is said to have a world lead in this field of research. The cancer research project chief, James Wood, told reporters at the laboratory:

"We cannot say definitely whether it will be a cure yet, but it looks like a 50-50 bet. It will take about three years to develop a neutron generating tube with the high power output that is required."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A vigorous storm that moved across the Gulf of Alasak Wednesday night brought rain and gales to the northern coast of B.C. today. Although considerable sunshine will precede the system elsewhere in the province rain will spread gradually down the coast during the day, while a combination of rain and snow is expected from it as it moves through the northern interior. Meanwhile, the southern interior should not be affected until tonight. Cool Pacific air will follow the disturbance so that cloudy skies and showers are in store for all regions on Friday.

COURT UPHOLDS LAW

NEW YORK (AP) — The Second United States Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld the constitutionality of a law making it a crime to destroy a draft card.

In a unanimous decision, the first ruling on the law, the court affirmed the conviction of David J. Miller, 24, of Voluntown, Conn.

Miller burned what he said was his draft card at a street rally here October 15, 1965, as a "symbolic protest" against United States involvement in the war in Viet Nam.

Truscott Evidence Ends

HEATH
. . . bypasses issues

OTTAWA (CP) — Presentation of new evidence was completed Wednesday in the Supreme Court of Canada's hearing into the 1959 sex slaying of Lynne Harper.

Next step in the cabinet-ordered review of Steven Truscott's conviction for the slaying is the submission of written arguments by the lawyers for the nine judges. This is to be done by Dec. 1 at which the same time a date will be set for oral presentation of the lawyers.

By late December or early in the new year, the high court is expected to be ready to say if the then 14-year-old boy was victim of a miscarriage of justice.

Their answer could mean a new trial, an order to acquit him or confirmation of his conviction.

Wednesday's hearing also produced statements from four psychiatrists that they found Truscott has no mental disorders.

During five days of hearing 26 witnesses, the court was told by defence witnesses that they believed Lynne Harper was assaulted and strangled elsewhere before her partially-nude body was dragged to the bush where it was found June 11, 1959.

Pathologists called by the defence supported this theory by pointing to a lack of blood where the body was found, few if any signs indicating rape had taken place there, and a number of cuts and scratches on the body they said were not caused in the act of murder.

Three Crown witnesses discounted the theory in their evidence Wednesday.

The Crown's last witness was James J. Hartford, a Kitchener, Ont., psychiatrist who examined Truscott a number of times after he was placed in Guelph reformatory.

He said he found Truscott likeable and to an untrained eye, he appeared normal.

"But I felt he was ill."

Truscott had a mental makeup that allowed him to appear calm when others would clearly be upset, Dr. Hartford said.

Replying to G. Arthur Martin, Truscott's lawyer, the doctor said he was concerned about Truscott's lack of involvement and by the fact he found Truscott's description of his parents inadequate.

Dr. Hartford also found it strange that Truscott was close only to his older brother. Mr. Martin wondered whether this wasn't normal since the father was in the RCAF and the family had moved several times.

AT BLACKPOOL MEET

Heath Tightens Leadership Hold

BLACKPOOL, England (CP) — Having reassured party leader Edward Heath of their support, 4,000 delegates to the Conservative party annual conference turned today to specific issues that confront them in opposition to the governing Labor party.

The ecstatic reception Heath got Wednesday for his speech to the opening session of the conference came at an opportune time.

A few hours after delegates had given him a standing ovation, Heath was confronted with a pair of opinion polls that showed the party's popularity has slumped again.

The Tories had made sharp gains over Labor when the first effects of Prime Minister Wilson's incomes-and-prices freeze began to show up in rising unemployment figures. But since last week's party conference in Brighton, Labor has recouped.

A poll published by The Daily Telegraph shows Labor with a 5½-per-cent margin over the Conservatives while another in The Daily Mail puts Labor's lead at nearly 15 per cent. A week ago, the Tories led Labor by 2½ per cent in The Telegraph's poll and trailed Labor by only seven per cent in The Mail's.

With the sobering background, the conference attempts today to define Tory policy on such prickly questions as Rhodesia.

The party's right wing, led by Lord Salisbury, has already given notice it plans to seek hard, specific commitments from party leaders that they will oposee mandatory sanctions against Rhodesia or any interference by the United Nations in the Rhodesian dispute.

Heath bypassed many of the issues which could divide the party in his address Wednesday, rallying delegates with an attack on socialist inroads into individual freedom and a pledge to build a new Britain.

Even the left-wing Daily Mirror conceded Heath's effectiveness, headlining its report from Blackpool: "Heath tightens his grip on the Tory leadership."

The right-wing press appeared ecstatic. "Heath floors his critics," said The Daily Express. "Heath renews Tory pride; prolonged ovation for conference speech," said The Daily Telegraph.

The pro-Liberal Guardian report said Heath now is "impregnable for the time being as leader," calling his speech a "walkover."

DON'T OFFER MEANS

The Heath oratory came after a day devoted to examining the party's policy and effectiveness in opposition. Several speakers called for more vigorous attacks on the Wilson government, but there were notably few suggestions how it could be done.

Heath, leader for the last 15 months, has been frequently criticized for appearing to let Wilson get the better of him in both tactics and debate.

In the end, delegates were given a good example of how Wilson can manage it.

Heath's speech was driven from the main headlines in the national press by a report on the controversial case of Timothy Evans, hanged in 1950 for the murder of his daughter in a case that has become a cause celebre in England. A judicial inquiry found Evans probably didn't kill his daughter but probably did kill his wife.

If your hat was blowing down the street, would you try to stop it by spreading your fingers out inside it?

NOT unless you're a nincompoop.

No, you'd just grab it, by the brim.

This is exactly the way a Rover 2000's Dunlop disc brakes work; positive, efficient, safe.

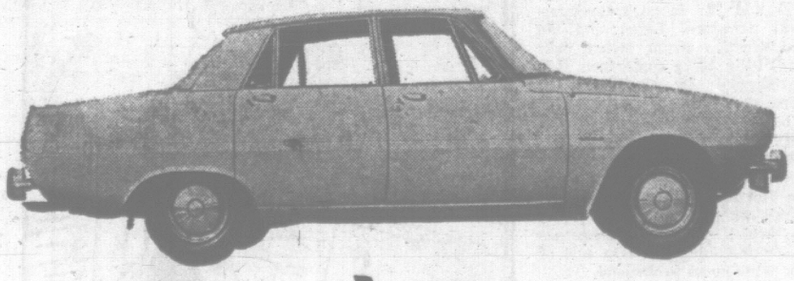

Ordinary brakes work on the nincompoop principle, which is one reason why ordinary cars have so many nasty accidents.

The Rover 2000's disc brakes never fade, or pull unevenly, and they last far longer. And so will you.

Question: If disc brakes are so safe why do ordinary cars stick with the nincompoop kind? We don't know, maybe they're stuck with them.

But you aren't; you can test drive the revolutionary Rover 2000 today. Perhaps you'll like the rest of it, too.

It's a car worth stopping.

The Basic Issue

THE RESOLUTION ADOPTED at the Liberal national conference to press for a North America free-trade area means various things to various people, but regardless of its interpretation, its implementation could result in grave dangers for Canada.

In understanding what the issue really is, as regards this nation, it is important to understand what it is not. It is not an argument of free trade versus tariffs. It is not a controversy between eastern industry and western agriculture. It is not a quarrel between supporters of Mr. Gordon and Mr. Sharp. To oppose it is not an exercise in anti-Americanism. The issue is essentially one of continentalism versus internationalism—and on this basis there can be only one answer if Canada is to retain its full identity and attain its true stature as a nation of the world.

* * *

By calling the concept a North American free-trade area—including thereby the Caribbean islands—the proponents of the plan have not disguised its real nature: which essentially is nothing other than a bilateral free trade agreement with the United States. Such an agreement is subject to all the hazards and objections of any ostensibly fair-share agreement in which one partner is ten times the size of the other.

The argument for such an arrangement lies principally in the proposition that it would raise our standard of living—as though the gauge of cars, television sets, telephones, outboard motorboats per thousand of population were the only applicable measure of the worth of an individual or a nation. We are so far above the subsistence level as a nation that the criterion of material benefit to be derived from inextricably close commercial association with the United States is not now the first consideration. Before it must come our plans and aspirations as a sovereign country.

If we have none, then engulfment in the sovereignty of our neighbor must be our plush-lined fate. But if we feel that as a people we have a right to exist, that we have a contribution to make to the world, and the ability to operate our half-continent as our own project in nationhood—if we have this concept of ourselves, then we must set national policies which will further our cause, develop our potential and carry us to our destiny as a distinguishable, independent and valuable member of the world community.

Absorption into the United States economic fabric will not lead to that end result, and a bilateral free trade arrangement with the United States would be only another step into full absorption. Already our heavy dependence on United States capital to develop our own resources has brought political problems, our deep involvement in import and export trade with the United States exerts its influence on our national actions. How could a complete free-trade relationship, in effect with only the one country, fail to integrate us further into both the economic and political umbra of our great neighbor?

With such a continental trade arrangement, it is clear, must also inevitably go the continental approach to natural resources. The insatiable needs of the rapidly growing population of the United States would be filled from Canada's assets: power for the industries in the south, water for the great cities in the south, fuels and metals for the economic development of the south—for on a continental basis resources would flow to where the people are already established. Canada's future would be assured—but not as Canada.

* * *

The answer, of course, does not lie in high-tariff isolationism either. That could bring only stagnation. It lies in development of trade with all countries and development of our own potential in such a free and universal trade.

It could lie in development of an Atlantic trading area in which we—and the United States—would become multilateral partners with all or some of the countries of Western Europe. It could lie in closer association with the countries of Latin America.

In the longer run it could lie in the multilateral association of countries bordering on the Pacific. And the eventual development could lie in a combination of all three of these possibilities together with extension of the association to countries of the under-developed world and countries presently behind the iron curtain. But whatever the ultimate pattern, a multilateral freeing of trade on the basis of many-sided partnerships should be the Canadian objective rather than an enormously lop-sided bilateral embrace with our immediate neighbor.

* * *

Mr. Robert Winters, minister of trade and commerce, is reported to have given "guarded" support to the Liberal resolution. Only ten days ago he told a Victoria audience in plain language: "I believe that our long term objective . . . in Canada's interests, should be freer trade, not continental or even regional, but on the widest global basis possible. I believe we cannot set ourselves a lesser goal."

There is nothing "guarded" about that. Let us hope the Liberal Party conventioneers will adopt a similarly statesmanlike view before it is too late.

Keeping the Channels Open

AS A RESULT OF TALKS BE-tween President Johnson and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko in Washington last weekend, there are hopeful signs that both the United States and Russia have retreated somewhat from their hard positions on a treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

Just what was agreed upon has not yet been made public, but it was evidently sufficient of a compromise to make it worthwhile for negotiations to be carried on again in the United Nations. Presumably the United States has dropped its insistence on retaining the so-called "European option" which would leave open the possibility of a NATO nuclear force some time in the future. This was a feature to which Russia had strongly objected.

The Russians also must have softened somewhat on their interpretation of what constitutes West German participation in NATO nuclear arms sharing, perhaps recognizing that strategic and tactical nuclear planning does not constitute the German "finger on the trigger" which, like many other Europeans, they will not countenance. Before further negotiations are carried on, according to an American government spokesman, the United States will consult its NATO allies, and this can be taken to mean that the Bonn government must be informed quite flatly that West Germany cannot expect any greater role in nuclear arms than it has now.

As well as the more hopeful prospect for a non-proliferation treaty which has arisen as a result of the Gromyko visit, there is some encouragement to believe that the Soviet Union is attempting, despite Viet Nam, to keep its relations with the United States on a reasonably friendly basis. It was reported that the White House discussion, which lasted for an hour and a quarter, was frank and amiable. Although no new solutions appeared to a number of problems, including Viet Nam and the disposition of forces in Europe, at least there has been established between Russia and the United States a fresh basis for negotiation.

"It's you he's following, John, not me."

Free Traders Sweep the Convention

THE Western Liberals rode high on Monday at a national conference which produced two decisions of importance. By far the most significant (and least expected by many Easterners) was the triumphant passage of the North American free trade resolution. But of very considerable immediate consequence was the resolution on medicare which followed an uncompromising speech by Mr. Mitchell Sharp and unquestionably added to his stature as a commanding leader in the Liberal government.

Western

Ther free trade resolution, a remarkably bold policy declaration, was inspired by the Saskatoon Liberal conference. It is an unqualified assertion that the government of Canada should institute negotiations leading to the formation of a North American free trade area, including the Caribbean Islands. Undoubtedly, it will be supplemented with recommendations for various forms of assistance to industries and to workers who may be adversely affected during the transitional period.

This issue is one of the oldest in our politics; as far back as 1891 a rather badly divided Liberal party campaigned unsuccessfully for what was then called "commercial union." It is not surprising that at the evening session the resolution produced an intense and at times rowdy debate. Unfortunately for the protectionists, their counter-attack came too late and their strategy was too obvious to be effective.

Study Paper

It is of some interest that the study paper before the conference (written by Mr. R. M. Fowler) spoke only of an unidentified "larger free trade area" as one possibility for exploration. From the very beginning of the afternoon "workshop" session, however, it was clear that the Western Liberals were determined to obtain a far more specific policy statement. Their principal leaders were Mr. Ray Perrault of British Columbia and Mr. Gildas Molgat of Manitoba, but they were fortunate, in the afternoon, to gain a helping hand from Mr. Robert Winters, the minister of trade and commerce, and in the evening from Mr. Nicholson, the minister of labor.

The general attitude of Western delegates was one of high confidence in the ability of Canadian producers to meet foreign competition. "What are we afraid of?" was their challenging cry. In the picturesque expression of Mr. Perrault, "We've been in economic knee breeches too long; it's time to put on long pants and strike out in the world." To the fear of some delegates that continentalism would mean the end of our independence, Mr. Molgat retorted that we were much more likely to go under if we continued to lag economically far behind the United States.

There were some cautious voices, mostly from central Canada, calling for a more gradual approach. But the Western Liberals and their allies so completely dominated the workship that when the resolution was put to a standing vote, not one delegate rose in opposition.

Attempted Rally

Thus routed in the committee, Liberal protectionists attempted to rally their forces for the plenary session. Their strategy was not to oppose free trade but to call for so much of it as to guarantee negotiations until the 21st century. They missed a main point of the Western Liberal argument; that while GATT is extremely important and deserving of full support, this form of negotiation is an extremely slow process. The advantage of the continental arrangement is that it offers a limited objective obtainable now.

After a plea on behalf of the textile industry by a Montreal Liberal, Mr. Raymond Rock, had been almost drowned in shouts of "don't be afraid," another Quebec delegate moved to substitute "North Atlantic" for "North American" in the trade resolution. As this would have involved negotiations in EFTA and the highly protectionist Common Market, it should have had a calming effect on some of the more disturbed Liberals from industrial areas. It did not, however, deter the opposition from an unsuccessful attempt to postpone the evil day even farther by bringing other European countries within the perimeter of the resolution.

Mr. Perrault, in a rousing speech, called on the delegates to choose between realism and a motherhood resolution. The strongest defender of motherhood was Mr. Herb Gray of Essex West, who complained bitterly of the unfairness of the resolution, warning that free trade within the United States had failed to eliminate pockets of poverty in the Appalachians and elsewhere. He saw a danger that Canada would be at the mercy of a supernational organization dominated by the United States as the larger partner. Mr. Gray, possibly with automobiles in mind, was strongly for the industry by industry approach.

Such appeals, however, came much too late. The protectionists had missed the bus. A voice vote revealed that they are a strong minority at the convention but their dissenting cries were overmatched by the roars of approval from victorious free trade forces.

There is, of course, a quite different alignment of forces in the parliamentary group which is heavily dominated by the central provinces. Since the government depends for its life on the caucus it may suffer some embarrassments in the immediate future as a result of the convention's historic turn away from the safe old paths towards a purposeful free trade policy.

The medicare resolution was deliberately phrased in face-saving language. It reads: "This convention deeply regrets the postponement of medicare and strongly affirms its determination to have medicare implemented as soon as conditions allow and certainly not later than July 1st, 1968."

This might perhaps be taken as an implied criticism of Mr. Sharp. But in fact he asked the conference to affirm its determination as stated above and he said: "I think too that we should indicate that we regret the necessity of postponing medicare." Hard necessity is always regrettable.

Medicare Rebellion

The rebels did not come to the convention to express regret; they came in the hope of over-turning government policy. They denied the economic necessity of postponement. Mr. Sharp met the opposition head on. "It would be illiberal and irresponsible," he said, "to proceed with medicare in 1967 when in the view of the government this would seriously undermine the position of the country and the budgetary position of the government. The only result of proceeding in 1967 as we see it now would be to greatly increase the likelihood that the rising prices and inflationary pressures we face today would continue indefinitely into the future and to ensure that we ran a budgetary deficit that would be neither justifiable nor sustainable in economic terms."

Mr. Sharp's "no" stuck and his prestige with the Liberal party stands very high.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Pressure on Washington for Peace

PRESIDENT Johnson's 45-minute conference with Secretary-General U Thant highlighted a paradox which lies behind much current UN diplomacy on Viet Nam. The softer the United States gets on peace terms, the greater is the pressure on Washington for still further concessions.

Frye

Johnson and his UN delegate, Arthur J. Goldberg, have offered to accept Thant's three-point Viet Nam peace plan — a halt to the bombing, mutual de-excalation, and a comprehensive peace conference — provided the Communists will do the same.

So far as is known, however, the Communists have refused to give any assurance they will reciprocate. They want unconditional American action.

The response here, in many quarters, is not to press the Communists for assurances, but rather to press the United States to go ahead anyway. Many UN diplomats, including Thant, want the United States to accept the Thant plan and start putting it into practice regardless of what the Communists may or may not do — hoping that the Reds will then come forward with a response.

Thant Position

The substance of the Johnson-Thant talks is being closely guarded. Sources close to both men say, however, that on the basis of the known views of the two men, Thant could only have urged Johnson to halt the bombing unconditionally.

The remainder of the "Thant Plan" would be consistent with American proposals if the Communists then responded by slowing down the fighting. Thant has insisted repeatedly that the Reds have "not rejected" his plan.

However, it would be a major move for Johnson to call off the bombers without knowing clearly, in Secretary of State Dean Rusk's oft-repeated phrase, what else would happen.

If Thant was not able to give him an assurance on this point — and there is no sign he could — it seems unlikely the president will move.

The sequence of events in recent weeks, however, tantalizes the UN and prompts it to cast about for ways to break the deadlock.

This is what has happened:

Sept. 22: U.S. (Goldberg) proposes bombing halt and troop withdrawal if Reds will reciprocate. Asks Reds for public or private assurance.

Sept. 23 and 24: They refuse, vowing American "aggression" must cease unilaterally.

Asking Price Lowered

Sept. 25 and 28: In separate interviews with newsmen, Hanoi and the National Liberation Front soften their asking price for a peace conference. U.S. troop withdrawal is no longer a precondition, they indicate, and the NLF need not be the "sole" representative of South Viet Nam at a peace table.

Sept. 29: U.S. stops bombing a portion of the demilitarized zone between North and South Viet Nam. Officially, the halt is to permit international inspection of the area (which in turn discourages infiltration): unofficially, it is a test of Communist willingness to respond.

Oct. 5: Thant says he is still active in seeking peace; lunches with Rusk. Johnson decides to go to New York Oct. 7 to deliver a speech Rusk had been scheduled to give. South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky softens his peace terms.

Oct. 7: Being in New York, near UN headquarters, Johnson drops in on Thant to "howdy and shake."

There is just enough movement implicit in these steps to interest the UN. There is much talk in the lobbies and lounges about ways to bring the two sides together. One course of action being proposed is a formal General Assembly endorsement of the Thant Plan, with follow-up action, including de-endorse follow-up action, including de-escalation and a conference, which both Thant and Johnson have urged.

As presently drafted, the appeal would put more pressure on Washington than on Hanoi. But this is where the UN wants it put — perhaps feeling that Washington is the more susceptible of the two capitals.

Individual Rights

By JAMES H. GRAY from Calgary

MORE guff is talked in Alberta about the rights of the individual, particularly individual enterprise as distinct from state enterprise, than anywhere else in Canada. But in its own action when individual rights get in the way, the Manning government seldom hesitates to seize the nearest dictatorial instrument at hand. To wit, and for example: The recent case of Alex Kalinowski and his 33-foot downtown building lot.

Gray

Mr. Kalinowski's lot is in the immediate vicinity of the new civic centre being erected in Edmonton. Over a period of months Mr. Kalinowski negotiated intermittently for the sale of this lot to the city. They could not get together on a price.

Some weeks ago Mr. Kalinowski decided that the thing to do was to put a two story office building on the lot. He applied for a building permit. The city of Edmonton building inspector refused the application, on the grounds that the city was not going to have any two-storey office building cluttering up its grandiose civic centre development. That development includes a huge new city hall, skyscraper office buildings, and ultimately it will be graced by a new, multi-million dollar court house.

Mr. Kalinowski sued the city for a building permit. His building plans conformed to city requirements, and the land was zoned to permit the kind of building Mr. Kalinowski wanted to build.

When the case reached trial, Harry Wilson, the solicitor for the city of Edmonton, contended that the city had offered Mr. Kalinowski a fair price for his land. It would, he said, be most unfortunate if Mr. Kalinowski was permitted to put up a building that did not conform with the city's plans for its centre development.

Judge's Decision

Judge Harold Riley, in giving judgment, agreed with the city that Mr. Kalinowski's project would foul up the city centre. On the other hand, Mr. Kalinowski had certain rights in connection with his property. One of them was to develop his property however he chose if his development conformed to the law. Mr. Kalinowski's plans conformed in every way with the city's zoning laws. Therefore, the city should issue a permit to Mr. Kalinowski to enable him to proceed with his project.

Six weeks passed and one day last week the entire weight of provincial authority landed like a judo chop on Mr. Kalinowski's neck. E. E. Wilson, the provincial property administrator, issued a ukase which upset the Alberta Supreme Court decision. In Alberta, that is hardly any trick at all.

The government, Mr. Wilson said was declaring Mr. Kalinowski's property to be a "public works development area" and was reserving the site for construction of a court house, if as and when it got around to building it.

As a result of this decision Mr. Kalinowski finds his building site frozen into immobility. He can do nothing with it, except perhaps pay his taxes, until the government decides to take it over. Then it will be expropriated.

In the meantime, Mr. Kalinowski will be free to open negotiations with the province for the sale of his lot. But it will be negotiation from weakness rather than from strength. From a position where he had the city of Edmonton completely over a barrel, he now finds all positions reversed.

Hands Tied

He is fresh out of alternatives. He can do nothing with his land. He is liable for its taxes and unless the province takes it over, his tax liability can run on for years. These facts, of course, will be right on top of the negotiating table when he tries to sell his property to the government.

Can Mr. Kalinowski not appeal against the arbitrary use of power and infringement of his property rights by government bureaucrats? Mr. Kalinowski is barred from the courts by the act under which the seizure was made. He has no right of appeal.

For almost 30 years, ever since the courts outlawed most of its early Social Credit legislation, the Manning government has taken a dim view of courts and judges. It bars appeals to the courts in a great deal of its legislation. In effect its Oil and Gas Conservation Boards, Utility Boards, etc. have been carpentered into the government's own courts. No appeals are allowed from the decisions of these boards, who play the game according to the ground rules laid down for them by the Alberta Legislature, not according to the ancient rights that are imbedded in the common law.

Looking Back

From the Times of Oct. 13, 1906:

The principal of St. Andrew's University, Dr. James Donaldson, in British Columbia for a few days, told an assemblage of secondary school teachers that a phonetic alphabet would soon have to be devised to replace the present one.

Dr. Donaldson said a new system of spelling would not only make teaching of the language to our children much easier, it would also help greatly in governing the colonies as it was of the utmost importance that every resident of the Empire should learn the language.

The 'Golden Bowler' Episode Only Policy Hellyer Regrets

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA—When Defence Minister Hellyer walks out of the House of Commons at the end of a sitting these fall afternoons, he is probably the handsomest, most confident-looking politician in the Western world.

Tall (6 feet, 3½ inches), fit, well-tailored, a distinguished premature grey at 42, a hot prospect for the leadership of his party. He looks and sounds like a man without a care.

But he has his problems. All the savings he and his unificationists strive for so assiduously tend to go on one roll of the dice back into higher salaries or inflated costs.

The budget he undertook to hold is bulging like an undersized girdle. The manpower level he undertook to reduce to 110,000 by August, 1966, is down to 105,000 and still falling.

Thinks Public Doesn't Understand

He is not very happy with the public level of understanding as to what he is doing, either. For instance, he said during a 3½-hour conversation that it is not true, as many believe, that he plans to eliminate the anti-submarine role for the navy (or, oops, Maritime Command).

"Nothing we've said should justify that interpretation," he said. "I have mentioned that great flexibility was planned for the maritime role. I also may have said that there was an anomaly in spending so much on anti-submarine warfare but that nevertheless we were in it and would keep up our expertise in that area."

Also, he objects to some reports about the most recent multiple bailing out of high officers. Several had quit this summer because they felt Mr. Hellyer was moving too rapidly on unification to allow sound planning.

In Many Cases Many Reasons

He said thsi was not the reason; that in many cases there had been many reasons, and that it should not be blamed on unification.

(However, to attack the matter from a slightly different angle, of the top 25 defence staff positions directly under the minister at Canadian forces headquarters, only seven have been unchanged since April 1. And one of the seven is retiring this month. Obviously, one department not yet redundant at headquarters is the one that handles printing new signs for office doors.)

Mr. Hellyer also took particular objection to my use in a column last month of the word, totalitarianism.

My idea had been based on the obvious fact that in his department he had systematically replaced anyone who opposed unification, or the present speed of unification. This, I thought, if moved to a larger sphere of power, represented an elimination of opposition above and beyond what is usual under our system.

He strongly denied this inference. "Everything I have done has been within the terms of our parliamentary system," he said.

He agreed with my suggestion that no defence minister in Canadian history ever had taken hold of the defence department with such a firm grip, but he defended that policy.

PAUL HELLYER
. . . has his problems

"When I was in the defence department as associate minister in 1957," he said, "we used to sit there and listen to what the officers told us had to be done. The prevailing idea was, 'Who are we to question?' By the time I got back (in 1963) I had a different idea. It was, 'Who are we to abdicate our responsibility to 20,000,000 Canadians to see that this department is managed properly?'"

He said he had some other direct answers "to those who say we're trying to run the thing arbitrarily."

One was that never before in history had there been a standing committee of defence in the Canadian House of Commons.

"We've had special committees, but never standing committees," he said. "Committees in the past have been allowed to delve into what had already happened. But this is the first time a committee ever has been allowed by a defence minister to deal with current and future defence policy. I'm also the first ever to allow senior officers to come and give testimony and be questioned."

He also defended against related criticism that his 1964 amendments to the National Defence Act left dangerously supreme power in the hands of the minister, by making all other officers responsible to the chief of defence staff, who in turn was responsible only to the minister.

The contrasting British system provides that the chiefs of the separate services are invited to meetings of the full cabinet on "appropriate occasions."

Each Guaranteed Right of Access

In Britain, each individual among these high officers is guaranteed right of access to the prime minister. Where there is a divergence of view among these high service advisers, the divergencies must be submitted to the secretary of state for decision or consideration by the full cabinet.

There is no such right of access for senior officers under the Canadian system, even if their views are so divergent that they lead to resignations, firings, and abrogations of the commandment that thou shalt not strike thy neighbor's executive assistant.

To Mr. Hellyer, it is chiefly a management problem. "Somebody has to run the thing," he said. "I don't know anybody running a business who would have people under him who could go over his head."

When Decisions Are Harmful

I postulated a situation where a defence minister, or an associate minister temporarily in charge, was taking decisions that in the judgment of his staff chiefs clearly were harmful or dangerous to the country.

Mr. Hellyer said: "In that case our senior officers would go to the prime minister whether the Defence Act called for it or not. Our system is so open that it couldn't happen."

Mr. Hellyer said that anyway, in practice, when he has a contentious matter to lay before the cabinet, "I insist that officers come with me and state their cases. When there are differences, I insist that they be heard by the cabinet." In short, he doesn't mind doing it as long as it is not required by law.

He had promised to increase the new equipment percentage of the defence budget and still keep within a budget of about $1.6 billions: could he stick to it?

"It depends on the inflation rate," he said. When he first agreed to a set budget it had a built-in rise of 2 per cent each year. A five-year new equipment program was to be paid for chiefly out of what would be saved by unification.

"Now it's impossible to do that under only a 2 per cent rise per year, and also keep up with prices and salary increases that we need because of inflation," he said.

Would he be able to get more money from his cabinet colleagues?

"You'd have to ask them," he said. "And it would be a good question. But you know what Sharp (Mitchell Sharp, Finance Minister) has said about keeping spending down. And in cabinet, you know how high a priority there was on some of the things canned—medicare, the scholarships, all that."

He said, however, that he favored long-range planning and ceilings not only for his own department, but for others.

Planning Only One Year Ahead

"Some of them don't know what money they're going to have from one year to the next, because they just plan one year ahead," he said. "We might be having a tough time keeping within our ceiling, but we at least know what we're trying to hit, five years in advance."

The only act under his administration that he unhesitatingly described as an error was the Golden Bowler of enforced retirements in 1964 and 1965. This plan paid cash bonuses and early pensions to discharged personnel, including some in their twenties.

"Looking back, I am sure we didn't have to do it," he said. "It spent money needlessly and also had a terrible effect on morale—and still is having an effect on morale, because even though we cancelled the Golden Bowler in 1965, a lot of people still think, 'if it happened once it could happen again.' This is the worst thing we've done—but it was something that had been done in other countries and was one case where I went right down the line with a staff decision."

What was the thinking behind the regimental system being retained for army units, even after unification?

"We did it because of the morale factor, and the color there is in regimental ceremonies and uniforms. You've got to have some color and variety. I've been in favor of keeping the regimental system right from the beginning. I figured if we'd done away with it, in five years we'd be around putting it back in."

The tri-services manpower total was a little more than 125,000 in 1964. Last figure given was 105,335. What was the low point beyond which services manpower could not go?

8,000 Men The Minimum

"I don't know," he said. "We maybe can get along on less than we have now. We're working on planning to get the figure on what we need. But let's say—if it went down to 80,000 we'd have to cut back our commitments."

Had consideration been given recently in caucus to reducing the forced we have in Europe?

"The subject come up from time to time," he said, "but not recently."

Mr. Hellyer's personal manner is one of considerable charm, but that is not to say that he lambastes his opponents any less in private than he sometimes does publicly.

The basis of his entire astonishing impact on the defence organization of this country is based on a single simple assumption: He is certain he is right.

He knows about management techniques, hand picks the men he wants around him, and now has such momentum that (as the song says) it might be for years and it might be forever before Canada can be sure whether he is right or wrong.

He admits without apparent rancor that his firing of Admiral William Landymore in July has hurt him politically.

"Until then," he said, "people were 95 per cent for what we were doing, but in a bland sort of way. Now there are about 75 per cent for, and they're more enthusiastic. But the 25 per cent against are real bitter."

How New Hampshire Operates Sole North American Lottery

By ALFRED FRIENDLY
The Washington Post

CONCORD, N. H. — In the three years it has operated its sweepstakes program, New Hampshire has touched the philanthropic heartstrings of the nation.

Several hundred thousand Americans, 80 to 90 per cent of them non-residents of the state, seem to have been so moved by the plight of New Hampshire's public school system that they have contributed close to $13.5 million to help it out.

Only cynics, weak in their faith in the American Way of Life, would assert that the donations were not wholly motivated by charity but were stimulated in part by the hope of getting some of the money rebated, in the form of prizes ranging from a few hundred to 50,000 dollars.

The New Hampshire lottery has paid out only $4,615,000 in prizes in three years, or about 35 cents per dollar of tickets sold.

Flying Start

The New Hampshire lottery got off to a flying start in 1964, when unofficial guesses that it would net $4 million a year seemed on the way to realization. The net went down to about $1.8 million for each of the next two years and although officials put a brave face on the matter, they are clearly disappointed.

In all, during the three years, the sweeps have produced about $6.5 million for the state's public school system, after payment of prizes and expenses. It is not enought to make do for the future.

In one highly important respect, however, the sweeps have been an unqualified success: Unlike every other major lottery in the history of the United States — there have been about 1,300 of them since Colonial days — it is free from scandal, corruption and outside swindlers, and is likely to remain so.

The operation is simple enough. The purchaser buys a ticket from a machine at any state liquor store or at the two licensed racetracks. He writes his name and address — or any name, that of a friend or someone who has commissioned him to lay the bet — and pays $3. The ticket, with its information, is retained in the machine. The buyer receives an acknowledgement — which he can tear up with no loss if he is worried about carrying it out of state.

A few days before each of the two races, the tickets, which have been carefully conserved in bank vaults, are mixed in a drum, and a number are drawn to match the names of all horses nominated for the race, as many as 425. There are also several draws for consolation prizes.

Wires Winners

The sweepstakes commission telegraphs the winners, using the names and address on the tickets. The initial prizes are modest, $125 or a bit more.

Larger prizes, $2,800 or so, go to holders of tickets matched with the names of the horses that actually go to the post. Then the big prizes, $50,000, $25,000 and $12,500 go to ticket-holders of the first, second and third place winners.

Historically, popular feelings about lotteries have come in waves. It was high at the time of the Revolution, and such founding fathers as Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and Hancock were strong supporters.

There followed a period of disillusionment, engendered by corruption and failure, and then another rise after the Civil War. Once agian, black corruption led to bitter antagonism and by the end of the century lotteries were banned by federal law and those of 35 states. Today, the upswing is strong again.

A broad objection to the sweepstakes is on civic or moral grounds — or perhaps merely on grounds of taste and dignity.

Greed is a universal human characteristic, but it is not a particularly attractive one. Is it fitting for a government body to set out deliberately to capitalize on the wish to get something for nothing, first having cultivated it?

Sweepstakes commission member Howell F. Shepard a former state legislator, rejects the argument on grounds that the lottery was overwhelmingly voted and is enthusiastically supported by the citizens of the state, as many referenda have shown. So how democratic can you get?

Some Distaste

Yet an observer here can be permitted a feeling of distaste at the sight of the commission's big promotion and advertising program, to stimulate a larger sale of tickets, and at its lobbying campaign for permission to sell them at hotels and other more available locations.

It somehow does not square with another much admired New England speciality, the Puritan ethic.

Japan Ups Trade with Red China

By RICHARD HALLORAN
The Washington Post

TOKYO — Communist China is well on its way to becoming Japan's second largest export market, an occurrence that will increasingly influence Japan's foreign policy and domestic politics.

During the first seven months of this year, Japan exported $193.8 million worth of goods to China, compared with $140.4 million in the same period last year.

Exports for the entire year are expected to total $350 million, compares with $245 million last year, moving China ahead of Australia as Japan's second best customer. The United States is, by far, Japan's best market.

Chemical fertilizers for China's reviving agriculture are the leading Japanese export. Iron and steel, textiles and light machinery are other major exports to China.

Raw Materials

From China, Japan has been buying mostly agricultural products and raw materials, including soy beans, corn, salt, rice and iron ore. Trade is roughly balanced and will reach a two-way total between $650 million and $700 million this year.

American and Japanese officials, when speaking to American audiences, for years have been contending that Japan's trade with China would not reach significant proportions. Now, however, it has not only become substantial but Japan's imports from China are in direct competition with some of Japan's purchases from the United states.

Japan's future exports to China depend largely on China's continuing ability to pay. Until now, Japan has consistently bought more from China than it has sold, providing the Chinese with foreign exchange to pay for Japanese exports.

Credit Good

(China has an excellent international credit rating, based on its payment of debts to the Soviet Union and meeting its obligations for wheat purchases from Canada and Australia.)

China's foreign exchange earnings come largely from agricultural exports and raw materials, which will be limited as needs at home increase. Moreover, as industrialization proceeds, the Chinese are looking for imports of heavy machinery and plants, which usually require long-term credits from the seller.

The increase in Japan's trade with China will have a marked but still undetermined impact on Japan's foreign policy, which is primarily motivated by trade considerations.

Voices for changing Japan's policy of opposing Peking's entry into the United Nations have become stronger and demands for Tokyo's establishment of some sort of diplomatic relation with Peking are expected to become more pressing.

Famous Last Words

Isaac Hull
(1773-1843)

This master mariner, who was born to the sea, commanded the Constitution ("Old Ironsides") in the epic 1812 battle with HMS Guerriere, a stunning victory which shattered the legend of British naval invincibility. On his deathbed he spoke the words he had never used in battle: "I strike my flag!"

Founders of B.C.

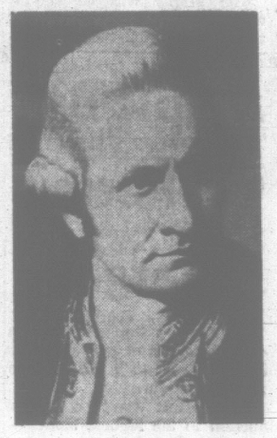

Captain James Cook is revered as the first white man to set foot on what is now British Columbia — but this great adventure was just one chapter of his life story.

He was a veteran of the siege of Louisburg and the fall of Quebec in 1758 and 1759 respectively. He surveyed the St. Lawrence in 1760 and Halifax Harbour in 1761 and 1762. In 1778 he was the discoverer of the Hawaiian Islands.

Born in Yorkshire in 1728 he entered the navy in 1755 and was soon a master of a ship. He began the first of three great voyages of discovery in 1768 and in the next ten years added greatly to the knowledge of New Zealand, Australia, the Antarctic and North West America.

It was on the third voyage after he left Hawaii (then called the Sandwich Islands) that he came to Nootka Sound and Vancouver Island in March 1778. He then travelled north to Alaska and into the Bering Sea until turned back by ice.

He returned to winter in Hawaii and there, in a skirmish with natives, he was killed. He was survived by his wife, Elizabeth and three children.

JAMES COOK

With the publication in 1782 of the account of his third and last voyage the existence of the sea otters on this coast became known and in consequence the maritime fur trade flourished.

Conservative Economics For the Liberal Party

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE
(Mr. Crowe is associate professor of history at Atkinson College, York University. Mr. Fisher, a former NDP MP, lectures in Canadian government at Carleton University.)

The paper which Prof. David Slater of Queen's University produced on problems and policies of economic growth in Canada for the Liberal Party's national conference will probably rank as one of the most learned and thoughtful and thoroughly good pieces of scholarship to which practising politicians in this country have been exposed.

Fisher

One is tempted to suggest that it is too good for a Liberal Party gathering, that this is the kind of thing which is produced for academic occasions. That would have to be said as well of some of the other papers at this conference.

But one must concede that Prof. Slater's point of view leaves no doubt that he has chosen the appropriate political forum. It is a clearly conservative approach to Canada's economic problems. Of course Prof. Slater is within the perimeter of permissible academic obfuscation when he presents such an approach as "liberal in orientation." The role which he sees for government is minimal, but where there is a role it is clear, unhesitant and unapologetic.

Crowe

The paper reads like a concentrated course in economic theory embedded in a compressed text in Canadian ecorjomic history. It would be impossible to summarize but here are some highlights:

1. The economic significance of foreign investment in Canada has been greatly exaggerated. Indebtedness is small in comparison with Canada's wealth and the servicing cost required by foreign investment is small in comparison with Canada's income. Changes in the flow of such investment should be influenced by monetary and fiscal policies and not by special direct restrictions as proposed by Walter Gordon.

Moreover, the size and form of foreign investments convey clear economic benefits to Canada. They reduce the cost and increase the availability of capital. They enlarge the Canadian tax base, improve Canadian participation in the growth of markets, the development and application of technical knowledge and improvement of management. Also Prof. Slater argues that foreign investment which carries with it ownership or control of an activity in Canada involves less risk of withdrawal than do foreign portfolio investments.

2. The Canadian economy needs planning machinery "outside of government." General national economic objectives should be set but not specific output targets. The emphasis is upon the collection and dissemination of information, the free market, government effort to promote competition. A Ministry of Economic Planning is not needed.

3. Toward the end of every business cycle expansion, inflation signs take on exaggerated dimensions. Canada is in one of those periods now in which longer-run inflationary potentials are exaggerated.

4. The application of guidelines is extraordinarily difficult. It is a moot point whether governmental efforts to influence wages and prices directly in a free market economy can be lasting or worthwhile.

5. The general expectation is that we are likely to have a business cycle recession before too long; indeed there are more and more signs that we have already passed the peak of the current expansion phase. However the recession is likely to be short and small.

6. The reduction of tariffs is the main path to domestic economic efficiency. A hothouse expansion of production for the home market as often as not is contrary to the use of what comparative advantages we have. A more open Canadian economy is not likely to be a more unstable one.

7. Government policies should be concerned with picking and promoting "winners" which would make the fullest use of our comparative advantages in the international market.

These are the views of a conservative economist, and national policy is concerned with much more than economic choices. If it were not, statecraft would be simple indeed.

Every society keeps repeating certain things to itself. One of the things which Canadians must keep repeating is that there is such a discipline as economics. What economists agree upon is infinitely greater than what they do not agree upon.

Canadian society expends great sums of money educating people on the discipline of economics. The trained product has uses. If it is our intention to ignore it we should save the money, and perhaps use it to train clowns to amuse us.

11 Left Homeless By Fire

TOFINO—A family of 11 persons was left homeless Wednesday night when fire destroyed their frame home on the Opitsate Reserve on nearby Meares Island.

Origin of the fire which destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Frank and their nine children is not yet known.

Neighbors were unable to contain the blaze because the only water available is from the sea and had to be hauled to the house in buckets.

Water mains are currently being installed on the reserve.

YOUNG CHIEF

One of the family is 14-year-old George Frank, hereditary chief of the Opitsates. An uncle, Joseph Frank is currently handling the affairs of the band on behalf of the chief.

The family will be staying with relatives and friends for the time being.

Maple Bay Oil Permit A Bargain

Realtor Nat Staples' permit to explore for oil or gas at Maple Bay will cost only $250, it was revealed Wednesday.

The permit won't go up for auction to the highest bidder—as will three others covering exploration rights on 60,000 acres in the area next month—for a technical reason.

Mr. Staples applied for a permit in an area that is not reserved by the government and has never been covered by a permit before.

In such cases, the petroleum resources branch charges only a nominal fee to avoid discouraging exploration in virgin areas.

SAMPLES TAKEN

Harvey Fulton, a geologist for the branch, and an official of the Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas subsidiary of the CPR took samples Wednesday of the flammable liquid found on Mr. Staples' property last week.

Mr. Staples said he has had a report on the liquid from one Edmonton oil firm already but would not reveal it until other tests were completed.

Daily Ten-Mile Walk By 'Young' Man of 70

By DON DINGWALL

DUNCAN — In an age when few people walk the length of themselves it's remarkable to find a man who walks an average of 10 miles a day.

Especially when he is 70 years of age.

Most mornings, L. J. (Red) Madison clips a pedometer on his pants and sets off for a walk.

He has four or five different routes and tramps around them at a brisk guardsman's pace — befitting an old soldier.

This walking jag isn't something Red Madison has been on all his life.

He only started when he retired in 1961.

Now he has a real fetish for fitness.

While being interviewed he suddenly jumped out of his comfortable chair and demonstrated push-ups.

"I can do 50 push-ups or 100 knee-bends without getting too winded," he says.

But these exercises are child's play to what the veteran has in the basement of his Howard Street home.

Mr. Madison would make many a man half his age blush with shame as he uses a variety of body-building equipment, including chest expanders.

"When I first retired all I did was watch TV and eat. Since I started walking and exercising I've cut my weight from 155 to 132 pounds and feel wonderful."

HEAD INJURY

What makes Mr. Madison's fitness program even more remarkable is the story of his head injury.

A working logger most of his life, Mr. Madison was hit on the back of the head by a clauson hook.

This was in 1931. He lay unconscious for 21 days and had to build up his strength for five months before doctors grafted rib cartilage to fill the hole in his head.

Mr. Madison literally lost part of his brain and suffered epilepsy for many years after.

He had served overseas in the First World War and was determined to see action again in 1939. Although the injury left Mr. Madison without left side vision he inveigled himself into the veterans' guard and served at many prisoner-of-war camps across Canada.

His early working life had been on the railroads, but subsequently he worked most of the logging camps on the West Coast.

His pedometer was a 70th birthday gift from his wife. Red set himself a September target of 300 miles walking. He made 310 miles.

Included in this total was his longest effort, 19 miles to the top of Mount Prevost and back.

Most of his walks range from eight to 13 miles. At first he tackled them before breakfast. Now he thinks himself a slouch because he waits until after he's eaten.

But he has had to cut out cycling. His wife "grounded" him after he had been knocked down by a passing car.

Only last summer, he rode a nine-speed bicycle to and from Victoria in one day.

He was out walking again next day.

3 Firms' Combined Effort Making Trees Grow Faster

DUNCAN — An experiment in rapid loading of flying fertilizer spreaders is underway on Vancouver Island.

Canadian Pacific Merchandising Services is trying to speed up the process of fertilizing immature forests from the air.

The project is a continuing experiment by Pacific Logging Co., in co-operation with Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co.

Specially-designed hopper railway cars, with a capacity of 100 tons, carry the fertilizer from Calgary to a siding near Cowichan Lake.

Twenty tons of dry cargo is then worm-fed into torpedo-like highway trailers in about 20 minutes, and is hauled 12 miles to the airstrip which Pacific Logging has built at Cowichan Lake.

TWO PLANES

There the cargo is blown into two aircraft with a capacity of 1,200 pounds each, and the load can be dropped within six minutes.

This eliminates the previous method of trucking bags of fertilizer and having to load the aircraft by hand.

Similar cars and highway trailers are being used to handle cement in shuttle service between the railway and the High Arrow dam site.

Judge Delays Buttle Lake Dumping Ruling

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mr. Justice Victor Dryer reserved decision Wednesday on a bid by Campbell River Water District to quash a permit issued to Western Mines Ltd., to dump effluent into Buttle Lake.

The reserved decision followed a company lawyer's denial of an earlier charge that there was improper liaison between Western Mines and the Public Utilities Commission.

Anthony Sarich, lawyer for the water district said Tuesday that dates on the permit indicated the permit was issued before the board had all information.

The company lawyer, Brian McLoughlin, said there could have been an error in the documents.

NO HEARING

The water district challenged issuance of the permit on grounds that it was denied permission to appear before the commission.

Western Mines has an operation within the boundaries of Strathcona Park on Vancouver Island and had applied and was given permission to dump waste into Buttle Lake.

Campbell River draws its drinking water from the lake.

EAGLES EYED

PORT HARDY (CP)—The department of transport has asked the Canadian Wildlife Service to conduct a study of eagles at the Port Hardy airport.

One of the giant birds grounded a DC-6 Oct. 5 when it rammed the wing of the airplane and punched an 18-inch hole.

Professors to Share Nobel Medicine Prize

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Two American professors today were jointly awarded the 1966 Nobel Prize for medicine. They were Dr. Peyton Rous, 87, of the Rockefeller University, New York, and Canadian-born Dr. Charles B. Huggins, 66, of Chicago University Hospital. Huggins is a native of Halifax.

Rous was awarded his prize for his discovery of tumor-inducing viruses and Huggins was cited for his discoveries concerning hormonal treatment of prostatic cancer, the awarding faculty of the Caroline Institute said.

They share 300,000 crowns ($60,000).

Rous, a native of Baltimore, received his medical degree from Johns Hopkins University in 1900. Since 1909, he has been connected with the Rockefeller University, formerly known as Rockefeller Institute.

Huggins was graduated from Harvard medical school in 1924 and holds degrees from several schools. He has been at the University of Chicago since 1927. He has been director of the Ben May laboratory for cancer research since 1951.

Huggins is a specialist in studies of the male uro-genital tract, cancer of the prostate and mammary cancer. He is married and has two children.

Rous is a world famed pathologist and specialist within the field of viruses as causative agents of cancer, mode of action of carcinogens, which are factors involved in the invasive growth of cancer, the Swedish medical college said.

Rous is married and has three daughters. One of them, Marion, is married to Briton Alan Lloyd Hodgkin of Cambridge University, who shared the 1963 Nobel Prize for medicine.

In 1910 Rous discovered the first virus that evokes malignant growths of the sarcoma type in hens. He managed to isolate that virus and kept it alive by letting it pass through fertilized hens' eggs.

The virus-cancer theory, however, did not attain any notable acclamation and as late as 1950 there was only one lecture on the importance of this connection at the Paris Cancer Congress.

Huggins' greatest achievement in the medical field dates back to a series of articles in the late 1930s, articles which were to open new ground for the treatment of certain forms of cancer in the human body, the Caroline Institute noted.

Rous and Huggins are the 26th and 27th Americans to win a Nobel medicine award, bringing the United States' total Nobel prizes to 89.

Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite, left $9,200,000 on his death in 1896 to set up the foundation which annually provides prizes for literature, medicine, peace work, physics and chemistry.

Huffin' Puffin' Artists

NEW YORK (AP)—A handful of huffing, puffing artists here are hoping to prove that inflation is not only economical but aesthetically good for the country.

They are pumping limp vinyl sacks into plump pillows, hassocks, free form sculpture, earrings, neckties, baby bibs, even beds. They say the future possibilities of cheap inflatables is unlimited.

In the middle of it are Phil Orenstein, a woolly - maned sculptor; his partner, an Indian philosophy student Sujan Souri; and a bearded musician-turned-salesman Paul Klein.

The inflatables are a part of a company they formed, reproducing the pop, op and 'way out works of their artist friends from cheap materials at cheap prices for the masses.

Insurance Surcharges 'Not Picked Out of Sky'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premium penalties for drivers with bad records are set by insurance companies after discussion but are not based on scientific data, the Royal Commission on Auto Insurance was told Wednesday.

Robert Parkin of Montreal, Canadian chairman of the assigned risk plan, said, however that the surcharges were not "picked out of the sky."

He said the surcharges, some high enough to make it financially impossible for a person to drive, are set by a committee after much discussion.

Details of the surcharges were given the commission during the day's hearing.

The commission was told of one 17-year-old who paid $912 for a year's coverage that normally would have cost him $299.

The difference was made up in penalty surcharges. He was charged 50 per cent more for being involved in two accidents, 50 per cent for conviction of driving without due care and attention, 55 per cent for four other convictions under the Motor Vehicles Act, and another 50 per cent for failing to disclose one accident and three other minor convictions.

Mr. Parkin said the non-disclosure penalty is an attempt to keep insurance applicants honest but other officials of the assigned risk plan said the practice was dropped six weeks ago as "a mistake."

BEATEN TO DEATH

NEW YORK (AP) — A 62-year-old union official was beaten to death Wednesday night as he walked with his dog near his Flushing, Queens, home.

Police were searching for a well-groomed man wearing a shirt with a ruffled front who neighbors said stood over the victim and kicked him in the head before fleeing in an auto.

The dead man was identified as James P. Fox, business agent for local 608, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

2.7% OF FORCE

Jobless Higher Than Last Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment fell to 205,000 during September, a reduction of 23,000 from August, mainly resulting from students in the summer labor force returning to school, it was announced today.

A joint announcement by the manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said a decline of 355,000 in the number of workers in the labor force under 25 years of age was partly offset by a gain of 89,000 older workers. These were mainly women.

The September unemployment figure of 205,000 was 29,000 higher than the number of unemployed in September last year. Most of this increase was among workers 14 to 24 years of age.

Unemployment in September represented 2.7 per cent of the labor force. This compared with 2.9 per cent in August this year, and 2.5 per cent in September last year. In September, 1964, the unemployment rate was 3.1 per cent of the labor force.

BACK TO STUDIES

The 7,311,000 Canadians with jobs in September this year showed a seasonal decrease of 266,000 from August. The total labor force—employed and unemployed—was down 289,000 to 7,516,000, which the report said was about normal for the period as students left the labor force to return to school."

Most of the reduction in employment was in non-farm industry, mainly manufacturing, construction and trade. The changes from August to September this year were about normal for the period in all industries except construction, where employment usually holds steady. It fell by 49,000 in September this year.

The job picture in brief (estimates in thousands)

	Sept. 1966	Aug. 1966	Sept. 1965
Labor force	7,516	7,805	7,159
Employed	7,311	7,577	6,983
Unemployed	205	228	176

ALL REGIONS HIGHER

The report said employment was higher in September than a year ago in all regions. The increases ranged from 2.8 per cent in the Atlantic provinces to 7.4 per cent in British Columbia.

Compared with a year earlier, non-farm employment was up 5.5 per cent across the country. The largest gains were in the community, business and personal service fields, and in manufacturing.

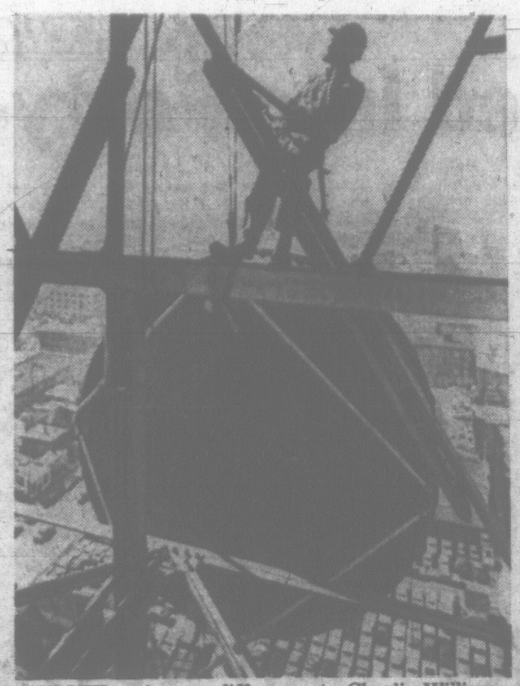

Farm employment was estimated at 603,000 in September, down 22,000 from a year ago.

The report said about four-fifths of the total number of unemployed had been out of work for three months or less. About 21,000 in September had been seeking jobs for four to six months, and 22,000 for seven months or more.

By regions, the unemployed numbered 4.2 per cent of the labor force in the Atlantic provinces, 3.5 per cent in Quebec, 2.1 per cent in Ontario, 1.3 per cent in the prairie provinces, and four per cent in British Columbia.

The report said the 2.7 per cent unemployment rate for all Canada in September represented a seasonally adjusted unemployment rate of four per cent for the whole country when seasonal factors are taken into account. But the latter figure is subject to revision when more up-to-date information on changes in seasonal patterns is available.

The joint report was based on a survey of representative households in the week ended Sept. 17.

B.C. Engineering Firm Sold to U.S. Group

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank M. Ross announced Wednesday that his Vancouver Iron and Engineering Works has been sold to a group of U.S. businessmen headed by J. Elroy McCaw of Seattle.

Details of the transaction, rumored since the beginning of August, were not disclosed, but the McCaw group described it as a "multi-million" deal.

In with McCaw were Harrison O. Ash, of Seattle and Vancouver Ole Bardahl, Dr. W. S. Brown and William R. MacPherson, all of Seattle, and William Lear, of Wichita, Kansas.

All but Mr. Brown are directors of Cascade Molybdenum, a Vancouver mining company with property in B.C. and the Northwest Territories.

Mr. McCaw said Vancouver Iron will be offered to Cascade Moly as soon as details can be worked out.

Westcoast Fared Badly—McMahon

VANCOUVER (CP) — Industrialist Frank McMahon told the National Energy Board Wednesday his Westcoast Transmission Co. fared badly on its initial contract to export natural gas to the U.S.

Mr. McMahon, Westcoast chairman, was giving evidence at an NEB hearing on a Westcoast application to boost the company's minimum shipments south of the border to 600,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

He said the company earned $2,800,000 last year, or about 40 cents a share. Income from the pipeline system itself totalled approximately $1,300,000 or about 21 cents per share.

Mr. McMahon said from the time the initial contract was signed in December, 1954, field prices for gas jumped from 6½ cents to 10¾ cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

HEARING ENDS

The five-day hearing ended Wednesday afternoon with the industrialist's testimony. The NEB is expected to release its decision on the application in about four months.

"While Westcoast brought many economic benefits to Canada, the company never made a resonable rate of return," he said.

"Wage increases and operating costs went up constantly year by year, and all this minimized earnings. Over the years we have been endeavoring to change the price we gained from the original contract—22 cents a thousand cubic feet."

Westcoast's application to the NEB follows its contract with El Paso Natural Gas Co. last February calling for sale of another 300,000,000 cubic feet daily over the next three years.

INTERIM APPLICATION

The company filed an interim application to pipe the first additional cubic feet across the border by Nov. 1.

Mr. McMahon said under the new contract, El Paso would pay 27 cents per 1,000, erasing completely the old 22-cent formula.

"While materially improving Westcoast's earnings, it will be of benefit to the B.C. consumer, it will stimulate gas and oil exploration in B.C. and northwestern Alberta and will bring $1,500,000,000 in U.S. money into Canada.

"We have granted lower prices to B.C. Hydro and Inland Natural Gas—the contract itself will result in large-scale drilling," Mr. McMahon said.

Investment Firm To Open New Offices

Investment dealers with nearly 25 years' experience in the Victoria market will open expanded premises Monday in the Scollard building.

Bongard, Leslie and Co. Ltd., and its associated firm, Carlile and McCarthy Co. Ltd., are at suite 314 in the Scollard building, Douglas at View.

They were located formerly in the Canada Trust building, 1205 Broad Street.

A $15,000 renovation was handled for the brokerage company by W. Campbell Ltd., Ray-Lo Floors and D and D Commercial Stationery.

With a staff of nine including five investment salesmen, Bongard's provide a complete brokerage service to most of the Victoria and up-Island brokers.

Their expansion is to meet changing conditions in the local investment business.

Bongard's have offices in other major cities of Canada and direct contacts with U.S. correspondents, plus connections to most parts of the world.

The firm is nearly 55 years old and first established in Victoria in 1942.

Stronger Than Steel Claim For New Material

LONDON (Reuters) — Two firms have announced plans to mass-produce carbon-fibre material, a new synthetic claimed to be 10 times stronger than steel.

By 1968 the material, developed by scientists at Britain's Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough, may be challenging steel and glass fibre for making aero-engine parts, car bodies, boats and domestic plastic fittings.

The material consists of long strands of carbon fibres which can be moulded with resins into structures which specialists say are more rigid than steel.

Wholesale Price Index Up in Sept.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics' general wholesale price index rose four-tenths of a point to 260.8 in September from 260.4 in August, the bureau reported today.

In the same period last year, the wholesale index fell to 251.1 from 251.4.

The index, based on 1935-39 wholesale prices equalling 100, measures price changes of raw and manufactured products at all levels of trade except retail.

Dr. Ed's 'Few Days' Turned Into Forty-Five Years

By HAL MALONE

"Two months ago," Dr. Edwin Henry Funk, 82, was saying, "I had a complete medical checkup. Heart, blood pressure, the works.

"When the physician had finished, he turned to me and said, 'Doctor, you're not in your 80s. You're only 55'."

He sat on the edge of a bed in the first aid hut at Sandown Park, his navy blue beret at a jaunty angle, owlish eyes peering through glasses perched part way down on the bridge of his nose. And he laughed.

"I never smoked or drank in my life," he said.

"And I played a lot of games. Baseball, hockey, lacrosse — out on a field where it was meant to be played, not in a building — and that's what kept me in shape.

"They used to think that too much activity hurt the heart. But that's not right. Lack of exercise hurts the heart. If you lay off between seasons fat gets in your heart and it never gets out."

Dr. Ed hasn't played any games for a long time and the former trim 135-pound frame is more pearish than svelte. But he has a kind of rosy healthiness about him. Time, however, gets to all men and Dr. Ed feels he has put in his time at the racetrack.

He has.

Forty-five years ago he came to the races as "official physician." Men and horses have moved through those years but always when the ponies galloped in Vancouver and Victoria, he was the medic.

"I got into this job in a strange sort of way," he said. "J. K. Matheson was head of the Pacific National Exhibition and a good friend. He had been my adjutant overseas with the Medical Corps. I was single and my practice was building when Mr. Matheson asked me to come to the track 'for a few days to help out.'

"The 'few days' turned out to be quite a few."

Grin. "Weeks, months and years." Forty-five of them. I never really gave full time to my practice from that day to this."

He clasped his hands in his lap.

"They may have difficulty getting the right sort of man to replace me," he said, confirming his retirement (he had announced earlier in the season "this will be my last year"). "I'm not boosting myself, but the job demands a lot.

"A man has to be a surgeon and a medical specialist. I used to do lots of surgery on track people. Haven't for some years though.

"You also have to be a diplomat. Every day an hour before the first race I talk to the riders. I can take them off their mounts if I don't think they are well. Only the stewards have that right, too.

"They're like children, the jockeys. Most of them don't have much education. They start young. They're dreamers. They hear about the money the Shoemakers and Longdens make but they forget there isn't much room at the top.

"It's better now. Their money is deposited in the bank. That's good. A boy might think twice about writing a cheque. But if he carries his roll with him he can easily blow it in a card game."

Like most physicians, Dr. Ed cherishes the physician - "patient" relationship.

For the jockeys he recalls busy days examining eyes blinded and burnt by flying mud.

"We used to treat them with a cocaine solution. Now they wear up to five pair of plastic goggles and flip them down as they get covered."

For the punters, there was always those who didn't have Dr. Ed's strong heart and low blood pressure. When you bet excitement is the name of the game.

"We had an average of about three deaths a year in Vancouver. Heart cases. In Victoria we hardly had any. The big problem here is hornets."

What prescription did he have for broken hearts, alias sad losers?

Dr. Ed laughed. Then this surgeon, twice a gold medallist at McGill, showed he was as much philosopher-diplomat as surgeon.

"I told them," he said, "'Don't bet!'"

MUTUEL MURMURS . . . First Fashion, a true mudlark, won his second race in three days and his fifth of the year over a good bunch of $1,600 horses in the feature . . . MUD, SCHMUD, WHO NEEDS IT?

Mud may be beautifying but don't try to sell that to a jockey. Sandown Park was dripping Wednesday and so were the riders. Walking along the boardwalk after the second race, Fred Finley, Ron Arnold and Maurice Milne show their feelings for the soft stuff. Jockey Sandy Shields, second from left, on track, sports almost spotless silks after being on front runner. Jockey Jack Phillips, who also was in front with ultimate winner of second, Donana, is also antiseptic. (Photo by Harry Filion.)

Keenan Returns to Leafs; Smoke Eaters Drubbed 6-2

(Special to The Times)

TRAIL—Victoria Maple Leafs reeled off their fifth straight exhibition victory, but the big news for the Western Hockey League came from another corner of the country.

While Leaf coach Frank Mario watched his charges breeze to a 6-2 decision over the amateur Trail Smoke Eaters, he learned Wednesday night that centre Larry Keenan has been re-assigned to Victoria.

Keenan has been working out with the parent Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League. He was scheduled to leave Ontario by car Wednesday and may arrive in Victoria in time to dress for Leafs' first game of the 1966-67 campaign.

That opener, against Oakland Seals, takes place Saturday in Memorial Arena.

Keenan and newly - acquired goaltender Al Smith both may take their seasonal bows in that opener. Smith arrived in Victoria Wednesday.

LARRY KEENAN

DEFENCE SPARKLES

While the reserve forces were "moving in," the Leafs completed their pre-season schedule with a "who-needs-'em" attitude. As in most of their exhibition outings, Leafs conquered the Smokies without too much difficulty.

Although the Western International League entry got to Victoria's alternating goalies, Mike Berridge and Gary Holland, for two goals, it was Leafs' defence that stood out in the latest victory.

Sparked by the play of the rearguards, Victoria held Smoke Eaters to a mere 16 shots on goal. Leafs peppered 50 at Jim Letcher.

CARMICHAEL MOVING

Bruce Carmichael, 32-year-old winger obtained from Vancouver Canucks in the off-season, led Victoria's offence with two goals and an assist. Singles went to Neil Clark, Dave Parenteau, Dick Lamoureux and Milan Marcetta.

Dave Rusnell and Gary Faro scored for Trail.

Carmichael, Parenteau and Rollie Wilcox were the pick of Victoria's attackers.

Mario took particular delight in watching Carmichael at work. After a so-so showing in earlier workouts, partly as a result of a cold, Carmichael has been a standout in Victoria's final two exhibitions.

Carmichael has filled in at left wing on Victoria's top-scoring line after veteran Andy Hebenton was sidelined last Saturday with a leg injury. "Hoagy" seemed completely at home while playing with Marcetta and Bob Barlow.

That line scored three of Victoria's six counters Wednesday and Barlow was unfortunate in not adding at least three more.

Steelers Make 'Major' Catch

Sadly lacking in majors (touchdowns) during this Pacific Football League season, Victoria Steelers have their hands on a "major" today.

This one is 6-1, 200 pounds, fresh off the University of Oregon campus.

He's Major Lincoln, halfback.

Besides being uncommonly large for a back, Major has speed. He reportedly trespasses the 100 yards in under 10 seconds, has posted a 14.2 in the 100 high hurdles.

Lincoln decided to sit out a semester at Oregon after starting the season with the Ducks.

Steelers' spokesman Jack Brauckmann claims Lincoln is "one of the hottest pro prospects in the Northwest."

Steelers can use him. They have lost all five games, host the belting Eugene Bombers at Macdonald Park Saturday at 2 p.m.

They may have to meet the Bombers without coach-quarterback Pete Ohler in strip.

Ohler suffered a mild concussion in the club's 30-14 loss to Edmonds last Sunday.

To counter his possible absence on the field Saturday, Ohler has devised two sets of offensive plays. If he's ready, Ohler will direct one. If he's not halfback Bill Taylor will guide the other.

In a major move to strengthen the offence Ohler has shifted defensive lineman Wayne Conrad to offensive guard.

He and Lutz Keller will be the pulling guards on sweeps.

FULL HOUSE NOMINATED FOR SANDOWN CLASSIC

Just when he figured he might end up with only two or three aces, racing secretary Stan Goddard today found himself with a full house for the $2,200 added Vancouver Island Championship Saturday at Sandown Park.

Nominated for Sandown's richest race were Gladys Ann, Sir Keno, winner of the Sandown Derby, and his stablemate, Keno's Boy, Count Leo, Sefton Park, Princess Vega, Jolly Pop, Who's Haydn, Peaceful Nite and Sir Kit.

Goddard will assign weights Friday for the mile classic. Owners paid $10 to nominate and will have to get up another $25 to see their horses start.

Saskatchewan Refusal Pouring Fuel on Fire

By The Canadian Press

A possible rift appeared in the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association Wednesday with the refusal by the Saskatchewan branch to take immediate action on a directive from the governing body.

The directive, issued by CAHA president Fred Page of North Vancouver, instructs the SAHA to inform clubs, players and officials in the newly - formed Canadian Major Junior Hockey League that they are under suspension.

Frank Germann of Wilcox, president of the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association, said in a statement that no action will be taken on the directive until all members of the provincial branch vote on the issue at a meeting in Regina Saturday.

Germann said the directive affects every junior A team in Saskatchewan.

"I reserve the right to delay any action until such time as all members of the SAHA have had an opportunity to voice their opinions and vote on each point, he said in a statement.

"I am not prepared to take it upon myself to allow anyone to assume jurisdiction of this branch of the CAHA and throw it into a state of confusion from which there may be no return.

"In the meantime, I can only hope the CAHA president could find it within himself to reconsider the action he has taken in this directive. The route he has chosen pours fuel upon the fire."

Players Indicate They'll Play On

Meanwhile, Stu Peppard, president of the Alberta branch, followed the directive and formally advised officials of the two Alberta teams in the new CMJHL — Edmonton Oil Kings and Calgary Buffalos—they are under suspension.

Peppard also invited players on both teams to switch to CAHA-approved clubs by today.

The CAHA refused to sanction the new seven - team league several weeks ago. Frank Boucher, commissioner of the CMJHL, later announced it would operate independently.

When regular - season play began last week, the CAHA suspended each of the participating clubs and announced it will suspend the players individually if they continue to play within the league after today.

Saskatchewan has five clubs entered in the new league—at Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Weyburn and Estevan.

Early indications showed Wednesday that most of the players will ignore the threat of suspension.

Nine members of the Calgary club were interviewed and all said they would stay with the club. The Oil Kings official said their players will ignore the order.

The CAHA suspensions, if carried out, will probably mean that a hockey player's career is ended when he graduates from the CMJHL.

Under a new CAHA-National Hockey League agreement, which becomes effective next July, all players will become eligible to be drafted by the professional clubs after their junior hockey career ends.

Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, said Wednesday in Montreal that the professional clubs "will recognize the suspensions and will not pick up the players."

This cuts off any avenue the players have to professional ranks.

The CAHA suspensions would also prevent the players from joining amateur teams anywhere in the world, since the International Amateur Ice Hockey Federation has always recognized suspensions by the CAHA in the past.

Boucher has contended that the suspended players would not be eligible for the NHL draft and would be in a better position to bargain for a professional contract since they would be free to dicker with any club.

Floyd Sahara Leader

LAS VEGAS (AP)—The $100,000 Sahara invitational golf tournament swung into the second round today with several intriguing possibilities.

Could Ray Floyd, the first-round leader, hang onto it with his first round three-under-par 68.

Or could the more celebrated Bill Casper, Jack Nicklaus or Arnold Palmer break par in quest of the $20,000 first prize?

So it was as play resumed over the 7,069-yard, par-36-35—71 Paradise Valley Country Club course.

Floyd Wednesday had six birdies and three over-par holes in his first competition since the Cleveland Open in August.

But National Open champion Casper conceded he did not putt well as he shot a 37-36—73. He had only three one-putt greens and missed two putts of seven and six feet for successive one-overs that hardly helped matters.

Nicklaus said his round of 36-35—71 included a 20-foot birdie putt on the seventh.

Palmer shot 35-36—71 and blamed the wind for most of his troubles. On the third hole, he said, a chip shot blew laterally 20 feet into the stiff elements.

FIRST ACE AT MEADOWS

It was the "first" for both Syd Clark and the Glen Meadows Golf Club.

Clark, playing in a three-some with Bruce Walker and Jack Myers, became the first person to score a hole-in-one on the new Saanich course by acing the 169-yard, par-three eighth hole this week.

Sutton's Spree Sparks Oak Bay

Ken Sutton went on a scoring spree Wednesday to help Oak Bay climbinto a tie for first place in the Inter-High School Senior Soccer League.

Sutton blasted three goals as the Oaks trimmed Esquimalt 5-1 and stepped into a deadlock with the idle Victoria High Tyees in the top berth.

Mount View squandered a chance to take over first place in another Wednesday match. The Hornets were upset 2-0 by Mount Douglas and remained one point back of the leaders, in a tie for third place.

Goals by Sutton and Tom Armstrong left Esquimalt and Oak Bay in a 1-1 tie at half time but the Oaks took over complete command in the second half.

FIRST BLANKING

Two goals by Sutton and singles by Jerry Horne and Bruce Howe completed the Oak Bay scoring.

Goalie Blaise MacDonald and Lorne Bunyan combined to sink the Hornets. MacDonald blanked Mount View for the first time this season and Bunyan scored both goals and the Mountaineers avenged an earlier loss to the Hornets.

Vic High and Oak Bay will duel at Oak Bay for the top spot Friday while Mount View will be at Esquimalt. Games start at 4 p.m.

KICKING SENSATION . . . . . SHOWS, THEN BLOWS

Has Anyone Seen Garo Sarkis?

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Reports of a sensational new field goal kicker brought reporters to Atlanta Stadium Wednesday but Falcons' coach Norb Hecker was forced to tell them they were too late.

The unkown specialist, named Garo Sarkis Yepremian, showed up in the Falcon camp Tuesday and amazed Hecker and the entire National Football League team by booting 55-yard field goals in a practice session.

Yepremian did it soccer style — with the inside of his left foot. He told coaches he was new at this sort of thing and should soon be up to 60 yards.

Wednesday, Yepremian failed to show as the Falcon practice session wore on and finally Hecker said: "He has gone shopping."

Reporters interpreted this to mean Yepremian, a Cyprus native who has been in the United States only four months, may be on his way to some other NFL team to display his skills and perhaps work a better deal for himself.

Someone mentioned Detroit Lions.

NADEN SQUAD STARTS WITH SHUTOUT WIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Defending champion HMCS Naden, a navy entry from the Canadian Forces Base at Esquimalt, scored a 2-1 victory over Air Force Base Gagetown in the opening round of the Canadian Armed Forces soccer tournament here Wednesday.

Winners of the Pearkes Trophy for the last two years, the Navy team controlled most of the play throughout the game. The single elimination tournament includes teams from eight zones across Canada.

In other action, Gimli scored an impressive 8-0 victory over Val-Cartier, while Halifax edged Edmonton 2-1 and Camp Borden downed Goose Bay Air Force Base 2-1.

The tournament will end Saturday.

VIKING VIEWS

By MIKE WOODLEY

With another sports session in full swing, University of Victoria athletes are taking justifiable pride in the performance of the soccer Vikings during the recent McGavin Cup competition.

Runners-up in the Victoria and District Soccer League's second division last season, the Vikings justified their elevation to the first division by reaching the cup final. However, their opposition in the duel for the silverware was the defending cup champion and coach John Pickburn's more experienced Canadian Scottish club proved a little stronger.

Vikings put up a good battle, leading 1-0 at half time, but they appeared to run out of steam in the second half and allowed the Scots two goals without a reply. Of particular note in the match were the first and last goals.

The first, scored by Vikings' Tony Fantillo, was the result of a smartly-executed corner kick by Bob Moysey. The last was an unfortunate one for the Vikings. Substitute goalie Jim Crawford, who played an outstanding game otherwise, misjudged a slow roller and it just trickled across the line behind him. It was a tough way to lose a close match. But Vikings had shown well and one of the Scottish players remarked at the final whistle, "We sure knew we were in a game".

League action for coach Wally Milligan's boys opens this weekend and judging by their McGavin Cup performance, the footballers from Gordon Head appear ready for their first year of first division play.

★ ★ ★

The rugby fellows were also in action over the weekend, as the Vikings opened their first division league play with a 14-9 win over Lake Cowichan. Uvic is without their top player of last year, Dave Clarke, who has left the university and is presently honeymooning in Japan.

However, as always, there are plenty of hard-nosed athletic types around the campus to take up the slack. So many this year that there are now three rugby teams under the wing of head coach Howard Gerwing.

To help fill Clarke's shoes Gerwing has acquired the services of former JBAA stalwart, Al Foster, and Foster, it turns out, had quite an afternoon in that Lake Cowichan game.

Al suffered a knock on the head early in the first half which caused him a temporary loss of memory. He continued to play without any apparent loss of ability and with memoryless Foster playing a whale of a tackling game, his mates forged into a 14-0 lead. After the half-time rest Foster's memory returned and, whether it is significant or not is a matter of conjecture, in the second half Vikings had to hang on for their win as Lake Cowichan out-scored them 9-0.

In that game Mike Fall kicked a brilliant conversion following one Viking try. He booted the ball through the uprights from a sharp angle as the try had been scored just inside corner flag.

★ ★ ★

Conversion attempts of Uvic's next three tries were not quite as successful, though, as Fall, Foster and Mike Hutchinson each missed from directly in front of the posts.

If they had needed those six points in the second half the absence of Mr. Clarke would have been sorely felt, for the kicking of conversions was one of the versatile Englishman's strong points.

Next opposition for the rugby Vikings will be Tilman Briggs' powerful James Bay Athletic Association squad. Game time will be 2 p.m. Sunday on the Gordon Head grounds. It should be an interesting match with Foster facing his former mates for the first time. Says coach Gerwing of Foster: "He's the man we needed; he's a determined player and a leader."

Vikings, who have had little success against JBAA in the past, and who have lacked a fiery leader in the past, hope they have found him in Foster. Sunday afternoon will be a big test. It should be quite a tussle!

Golf Writers Rap Nicklaus —But Politely

LONDON (CP)—The clash of Jack Nicklaus, of the United States, with a referee in the Piccadilly World match was politely deplored by golf writers.

National newspaper reporters, commenting in moderate terms, generally took the view that the disputed decision by referee Col. A. A. Duncan, former Walker Cup captain, should have been accepted as final by Nicklaus. It appears, however, that the course rule involved gave support to the American's stand.

During his final match against South Africa's Gary Player, who successfully defended his Piccadilly title, Nicklaus dropped the ball under penalty after putting his tee shot at the ninth into a ditch.

Duncan disallowed Nicklaus' request for another drop on the ground that an advertising board, some 50 yards ahead, was on his line to the green.

"It was a fair request, though an optimistic one and it was unlikely to produce a half for Nicklaus whatever happened," says Donald Steel in The Sunday Telegraph.

"But it was most surprising that the American adopted the attitude he did over Col. Duncan's refusal to allow him the relief."

REFEREE REPLACED

Nicklaus told Duncan he regarded it as a "bum decision" and he accepted the referee's offer to stand down, with Gerald Micklem, recent chairman of the Royal and Ancient Championship Committee, taking over refereeing duties.

Steel says the onlooker "must sympathize with Duncan whose decision, like those of all referees, should have been final." Steel concedes however, that "unlike a number of professionals, Nicklaus undoubtedly knows the rules and this was a dispute over an interpretation of one of them. . . ."

The Sunday Times, in its front-page story, says rules for the Surrey Wentworth course state that if a temporary structure intervenes between the ball and the hole, the ball may be lifted without penalty and dropped at the nearest point where there is no interference.

FINALLY MADE UP

"An unhappy circumstance which later was made up by handshakes all round and now may be forgotten," says Henry Longhurst in the Sunday Times regarding the Nicklaus-Duncan dispute.

Henry Cotton in The News of the World, another Sunday newspaper, says: "I know the combatants are nice fellows and great golfers and I know the rules are just. But I do not know why, on the most important day, there is always the danger of rules being interpreted in favor of the star. I wish there were more referees like Tony Duncan, as fair, as experienced. . . ."

The incident is generally described as unprecedented in British golf. Nicklaus is British Open champion.

The disagreement disturbed a "great occasion and it is my guess that no one lost more by this than Nicklaus himself," says Leonard Crawley in The Daily Telegraph.

"It was disappointing that Nicklaus, whose behavior has always been impeccable, should have acted thus and I trust the matter now will be swiftly forgotten," says Pat Ward-Thomas in The Guardian.

NORTH SHORE WINS — JAMIESON CHASED

Victoria Has Company

VANCOUVER — Young legs have carried North Shore Luckies into a tie for first place in the Pacific Coast Soccer League.

Luckies joined Victoria O'Keefes at the top of the pack Wednesday after North Shore tripped UBC Thunderbirds 1-0 on a second-half goal by left wing Geoff Hastings.

Hastings hit the target at the eight-minute mark of the second half, banging in the rebound after UBC goalie Bruce Ballam had parried a hard shot from centre forward Max Finney.

Thunderbirds, now a point behind the co-leaders, finished the match with only 10 men after losing winger Jim Jamieson via the foul route. Jamieson, who played for Victoria the past two years, was sent off for kicking North Shore's Ted Atkinson.

STRIKE MONDAY

Tension Grows In GE Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Electric Co. appeared headed today toward the biggest strike in its history in a showdown climaxing years of strained labor relations.

The firm, with more than $6,000,000,000 a year in sales of products ranging from light bulbs to jet aircraft engines, faces a walkout by some 125,000 workers at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

"There is an explosion brewing here," said a spokesman for 11 unions that have banded together this year for the first time to take on the big firm in contract negotiations.

President Johnson, who named three cabinet members to try to resolve the dispute, is reported ready to invoke an 80-day Taft-Hartley labor law injunction to halt a strike because of production vital to the war in Viet Nam.

But union spokesmen predict that pent-up resentment among union workers will be even worse after the 80 days run out.

So important is the case to organized American labor that President George Meany of the 13,500,000-member AFL-CIO is heading a committee advising the unions involved.

WILL CALL MEETING

Meany will call a meeting Friday of the chiefs of the 11 unions, led by President Paul Jennings of the International Union of Electrical Workers. Jennings' union represents 80,000 GE workers.

The government panel Tuesday brushed aside a company proposal for a voluntary no-strike pledge at GE defence plants for 60 days and a vote later among employees on the company's "final" offer.

"We did not think it was responsible to the president's request," said Commerce Secretary John Connor, speaking for the panel. Other members are Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz and Deputy Defence Secretary Cyrus Vance, sitting in for Defence Secretary Robert McNamara, who is in South Viet Nam.

Wirtz said he probably will call a meeting of the two sides today for the first time since the talks were moved here 10 days ago after President Johnson won a two-week strike postponement.

The company has offered wage increases it estimates at about four per cent a year, an additional six cents an hour in cost-of-living increases and improved insurance and pensions and other benefits.

The unions admit it's the best contract offer ever received from GE—but not good enough.

AVERAGE $2.80

GE workers involved in the negotiations now average about $2.80 an hour plus some 45 cents more in fringe benefits.

The unions, charging the company with a long history of undercutting wages and working conditions after a contract is signed, also demand binding arbitration to settle grievances that have led in the past to a rash of strikes at the firm's approximately 160 plants around the United States.

And the union wants to narrow geographical pay differentials, which they say now result in as much as 85 cents an hour less pay in southern U.S. plants than in northern factories for the same work.

But the roots of the bitter dispute go much deeper than the economic issues.

"It's not economics; it's either union politics or something else," said Chief Company Negotiator Philip Moore.

Union spokesmen claim the "something else" is a long pent up frustration among GE workers, who they say earn at least 25 cents an hour less than workers in comparable industries.

EXPERT SAYS:

Government Must Guide Automation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The most important challenge to the existence of the free enterprise system is automation an industrial expert said here.

Prof. Georges Friedmann, director of Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, Sorbonne, Paris, said the problems of automation are so complex only governments can meet them.

"It is impossible for free enterprise techniques to cope with automation," he said.

Prof. Friedmann, here to lecture at Simon Fraser University and the University of British Columbia, said in an interview governments will be forced to become involved in education, employment, cultural and recreational activities. They will also be forced to become involved in re-education to an extent that cannot yet be foreseen.

He said automation poses problems that could be dangerous to society unless dealt with intelligently.

Prof. Friedmann said he doubts automation will one day become a monster out of control, like a runaway robot, because "surely in a rational society we are capable of harnessing it to our own good."

West Liberals Show Surprise At Easy Convention Victories

OTTAWA (CP)—Western Liberals jubilantly tallied up a perfect record Wednesday night as the national party policy conference ended with all their major recommendations intact and adopted.

"I didn't expect to win everything we came to get," said Gil Molgat, Manitoba Liberal leader. "We expected it to be a lot tougher than it was."

The three - day conference adopted all five major resolutions proposed by the well-organized and powerful western delegation. Two called for agricultural changes, one asked for a policy on water export and the balance — both considered critical—dealt with free trade and foreign investment.

As an added bonus, the foreign investment resolution drew support from both Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp and his predecessor Walter Gordon, as they tried to patch up their long-standing feud on economic policies.

Ray Perrault, British Columbia leader, said: "It was the first time the West has scored such important victories. Until this time, the policies of the party have been the policies of Eastern Canada."

A dry-run conference by westerners in Saskatoon two months ago and subsequent meetings by provincial leaders played a decisive role, said Mr. Perrault.

"We decided to be outward-looking and positive in our thinking, not an angry group of isolated western provinces. It was the first time the West got together to speak with a united voice."

Mr. Molgat said the apparent division on free trade and foreign investment among Eastern Liberals helped solidify the western position on these issues.

"We came here really concerned about the economic policies, whether Canada would become inward and protective or continue to expand outward with confidence. That was the fundamental issue."

Their resolution urged the federal government to encourage greater Canadian ownership without discouraging foreign investment. The battle lines were drawn by another resolution that welcome foreign investment as debt capital while Canadians gained, over a set period, increasing equity control.

An informed source said Mr. Gordon sought—and obtained—a meeting with western representatives after the West's resolution was passed by a conference workshop.

At the meeting—attended by Mr. Gordon, Maurice Lamontagne, former secretary of state and staunch Gordon supporter, and Mr. Sharp—the compromise was hammered out.

The compromise resolution welcomed foreign capital, encouraging it to focus on bonds and long-term securities and fostering the partnership of Canadian and foreign capital.

Mr. Molgat denied that it was a compromise resolution—"we were simply prepared to explain our position in a manner that permitted them to agree with our stand."

Mr. Perrault, however, said it was a compromise and freely admitted warning delegates about the importance of attending the sessions for voting as well as planning in advance floor organization.

The convention approved a resolution for a free trade arrangement to link Canada and the United States. Others called for increasing the initial payment on what, increasing the floor price on wheat when the International Wheat Agreement is renegotiated and reviewing Canada's water resources before exporting it to the United States.

Both Mr. Molgat and Wilfred Gardiner, Saskatchewan public works minister, predicted the obvious victory on the convention floor will turn into Liberal votes on Prairie fields, where only one Liberal holds a Commons seat.

Expanded French Use Supported by Grits

OTTAWA (CP)—A wide variety of steps to expand the use of French in federal and provincial activities was approved by a Liberal party workshop Wednesday after heated debate.

About 500 delegates to the Liberal policy conference quickly and easily approved a dozen resolutions on bilingualism at the end of a 90-minute emotion-charged discussion.

Most of the debate consisted of a semantic wrangle. Delegates argued whether Canada should be one nation, two nations, bicultural, multicultural or unicultural.

Finally, most voted for a compromise motion reading: "The government should promote and encourage one Canada, bilingual and multicultural."

Specific proposals to promote bilingualism included:

- Amendment of section 133 of the British North America Act to give French-speaking minorities outside Quebec the same language and education rights as those now accorded English-speaking residents of Quebec.
- Extension of the CBC French and English broadcasting networks from coast to coast.
- An attempt to establish a bilingual, federal administration in the national capital.
- Extension of bilingualism to all federal agencies, Crown corporations and the armed forces in the forms of correspondence, documents and signs. A motion said every federal office across Canada should have at least one bilingual civil servant.

The most outspoken dissident was Ralph Cowan, MP for York-Humber, who recently lost a legal battle to take Toronto's French-language CBC radio station off the air.

He said it is a myth that Canada has two official languages. Amid boos and hisses, he argued that official recognition of French extends only to the federal and Quebec parliaments and their journals.

RE-ELECTED by acclamation to a second term as president of the Liberal Federation of Canada is Senator John L. Nichol, 42, a native of Vancouver. The party's biennial conference in Ottawa ended Wednesday night.

UNITY STRESSED

OTTAWA (CP) — The unity-conscious Liberal policy conference Wednesday unanimously endorsed the federal system and warned both federal and provincial governments to respect the existing division of powers under the constitution.

External Affairs Minister Martin made a dramatic intervention to support the resolution containing these principles.

The endorsement appeared to rebuff the intent of many earlier resolutions to exert stronger federal control in fields such as water resources and education. The trend had aroused the hostility of many French-Canadian delegates seeking to protect Quebec rights.

The resolution noted that federalism means a division of jurisdiction and responsibility and that national problems do not warrant transgression of this constitutional division of powers. It said other conference resolutions must be interpreted in this light.

Delivering an emotional plea for national unity in a federal state, Mr. Martin said the people of Quebec will be the last to want Canada destroyed and mutilated.

Liberals Demonstrate Confidence in Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson made it unmistakebly plain Wednesday night that he's Liberal party leader for some time yet.

After he appealed to the party faithful to judge him as leader by what he helped achieve for national unity and material well-being of Canadians, several thousand Liberal partisans went wild in a 3½-minute demonstration of confidence.

The 69-year-old Liberal leader devoted the final minutes of an address to the concluding banquet of the party's policy conference to personal thoughts on leadership.

While nobody seriously expected him to indicate when he will step down, he made at least one joking reference to the men eager to succeed him.

He grinned broadly at the outset of his speech when the audience laughed at his reference to "heirs apparent and not so apparent."

More seriously at another point he said his experience "extending over too many years now" had taught him the all-or-nothing approach to human problems is almost certain to fail.

He said he has no illusions about his infallibility or indispensability and acknowledged a "great handicap" of being able to see both sides of a question.

But, he said, the man who sees only one side and digs in on that can lead his party and country to disaster if he's wrong.

On economic policy, he took the same compromise position taken by Finance Minister Sharp and former finance minister Walter Gordon, whose supporters had been at each others throats in workshop debates.

"We must put into effect expansionist, outward-looking policies," Mr. Pearson said in almost the words used by Mr. Sharp in supporting a compromise economic resolution.

"And I think we must welcome foreign capital and enterprise but insist it become and remain Canadian in its operation," the prime minister added with an apparent nod towards the Gordon camp.

It was against a background of convention action on matters affecting French - English and federal-provincial relations that Mr. Pearson appealed for understanding, tolerance and good will in trying to solve these basic problems.

A series of resolutions had seemed to assert an aim of stronger federal control in fields such as water resources and education which aroused provincial-rights hostility especially among Quebec delegates.

External Affairs Minister Martin stepped into the controversy at a plenary session Wednesday with an emotional and successful plea for the convention to endorse the federal system and respect the existing division of powers under the constitution.

Possibly in this spirit the convention also modified an education resolution urging that Ottawa ensure the provinces have the means to make education accessible to all. Previously it had stated as a principle universal accessibility to education.

The plenary session also reversed an earlier vote which favored establishing a federal department of urban and regional affairs. A program of aid for urban development research and planning was substituted before the whole matter was shunted into the party's policy committee.

Victoria Defeated on Sewer Question

An Oak Bay request for a committee to study trunk sewer financing was upheld by the Capital Regional District Board Wednesday.

Victoria was soundly defeated in attempts to eliminate the committee study.

Reeve Alan Cox moved that the Regional District of the Capital of B.C. endorse in principle the recommendations of the Sewerage Study Survey, and establish a technical and financial committee to find an equitable cost-sharing formula for the $23 million project.

Victoria representatives on the board, led by Mayor A. W. Toone, balked at endorsing the recommendations even in principle.

Mayor Toone said his council had studied the problem carefully and had decided that to endorse the survey recommendations in principle might indicate that the city regarded those recommendations as desirable.

"We have decided that we would not accept the sewer study recommendations as a regional district responsibility at this time, in principle or otherwise," he said. "We are not prepared to vote for adoption until we have complete details on the cost."

All board members present agreed that the cost-sharing formula was the toughest and most important problem facing the district so far as the sewerage survey recommendations went.

But only Victoria felt that endorsation of the recommendations in principle was dangerous.

On the vote the three Victoria representatives abstained from voting. The rest voted solidly in favor of the Oak Bay resolution.

ANOTHER SETBACK

Earlier in the meeting Mayor Toone had suffered another defeat in a Victoria proposal calling a halt to all discussions until a technical and financial committee has produced a satisfactory financial solution.

Coun. James Bryant, Esquimalt, said, "We are concerned in our municipality as to how much this will cost our taxpayers," he said. "But we are prepared to endorse the recommendations in principle. I can't see any harm in that."

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, who along with Ald. Cecil Parrott and Mayor Toone represented Victoria, disagreed.

"I don't see how you can endorse it in principle until you know the cost," he said. "Until I know what I'm letting the people of Victoria in for cost-wise, I am not going to endorse it in principle.

"If we endorse this report in principle we could possibly be involved in the whole thing."

Coun. Leslie Passmore of Saanich who had earlier withdrawn a motion calling for immediate implementation of the survey recommendations, said the sewerage problem could only be solved by united effort.

ONE FOR ALL

"This is a case of all for one and one for all," he said. "It is agreed that costs are a major factor and will have to be studied closely before we make any final commitments."

Reeve Curtis, leaving the chair briefly to enter the debate, said it was important that the views of Saanich be firmly and clearly understood.

"We recognize that a cost sharing formula must be agreed upon," he said. "It is not now, and never has been, the desire of Saanich to sidestep its responsibilities.

Regional Board Takes Step To Expropriate Lagoon

The Regional District of the Capital of B.C. gave three readings to a bylaw Wednesday which will pave the way for the expropriation of Witty's Lagoon.

The district board has sought the property for months for a regional park serving the Greater Victoria area.

To date all offers for the property — the latest of $100,000—have been rejected by the owners Leslie E. and Stanley C. Witty.

In a letter to the board Stanley Witty said through his lawyer that the $100,000 offer was "ridiculous" and "wholly unacceptable."

Mr. Witty said he was negotiating with private interests at a price far higher than the $100,000 offered and well in excess of $175,000 he claimed Kenneth Kiernan, minister of recreation and conservation offered some months ago.

Provincial parks authorities later denied that Mr. Kiernan had ever made a solid offer of $175,000 for the 40-acre Metchosin property.

In a second letter to the regional board Leslie Witty, a resident of the United States, using the same legal representative as his brother, also rejected the $100,000 bid.

He said the sale to private interests of the property, which, he stated, was "of great value as a resort area" would likely be made in the near future.

He did, however, add that if the regional district would meet the Witty price he and his brother would not expect immediate payment.

The board, frustrated for months in its attempts to find a price suitable to the Witty brothers, decided that further negotiations would be pointless.

On the recommendation of Geoffrey Mitchell, a director representing Metchosin, the board gave the three first readings to an expropriation bylaw.

Final reading will be given in one months time unless agreement can be reached on a price for the property within the next 30 days.

Reeve Alan Cox, Oak Bay, asked that a copy of the proceedings be sent to the Witty brothers' lawyer plus a copy of an independent appraisal recently made on the property for the board.

WILL HE MAKE MOVE IN '68?

Students Begin Drive For Bobby Kennedy

By RELMAN G. MORIN

NEW YORK (AP) — An automobile rolled slowly through a New York summer resort town recently bearing an orange-and-black bumper sticker which read, "Kennedy Fulbright 1968."

The sticker struck one responsive chord. A woman who saw it promptly joined the organization distributing it, CFKF, which stands for Citizens for Kennedy Fulbright. Sponsors said they are also seeking signatures from Democrats and independent voters on petitions, 10,000 initially, to nominate Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York for president and Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas for vice-president in 1968.

FULBRIGHT
. . . running mate?

Why these two? Because Kennedy and Fulbright, who is chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, differ with President Johnson on foreign policy and so does CFKF. A leaflet says the senators are "symbols of sanity in foreign policy," whereas, it continues, the administration policy is "dangerous and inflexible."

This means, primarily, the war in Viet Nam and the corollary problems of China and Southeast Asia, issues that disturb many Americans and, depending on the situation two years hence, may very well be a major battleground in the presidential elections.

MOSTLY LAW STUDENTS

Law students appear to constitute the nucleus of CFKF. Spokesmen said centres have been opened in New York City, Berkeley, Calif., and New Haven, Conn. They plan others in New Jersey and Massachusetts.

This is probably the first organized effort of any size to make Robert Francis Kennedy the Democratic candidate for president in 1968. But it is not an entirely isolated instance. Individuals write Kennedy urging him to oppose Johnson for the nomination.

To CFKF and other such suggested movements, Kennedy replies with what amounts to a form letter saying he has "no future plans other than to serve New York state and the nation to the best of my ability as a United States senator."

Further, he has repeatedly said he would support Johnson and Vice-President Hubert Humphrey in 1968.

But, in two years, circumstances could radically change the picture as it stands today. If so, Kennedy has positioned himself magnificently to reach for the shiniest prize. He is the most talked - about senator — slightly to the left of both Johnson and Humphrey. He has made himself highly visible on key domestic and foreign issues.

To get the nomination for him, Kennedy's friends would have to get the Democratic party to repudiate a Democratic president if they entered his name in some state primaries in 1968, or organize a write-in vote for him — something practically unheard of in modern politics.

But if the No. 1 spot on the '68 ticket appears to be a bit out of the reach for Kennedy, his booming political stock naturally stirs talk about nominating him for vice-president.

If it happened, it would be an ironic footnote to history.

For, only two years ago, Kennedy seemed the obvious choice for the vice - presidential nomination. He wanted it and the polls attested his popularity over all other potential nominees. Then Johnson effectively dealt him out of the running.

Kennedy then ran for the senate, winning election and, in two short years, has won the respect of his colleagues, become the most powerful Democrat in New York, and the hottest political property in the country.

STOCK STILL BOOMS

Public opinion polls show Kennedy running ahead of the president in California, Iowa and Michigan. The Minnesota poll gave Kennedy at two-to-one margin over Humphrey as the strongest potential running mate for Johnson in 1968. This, in Humphrey's home state.

And a recent Gallup Poll showed Kennedy leading the president as the favorite among both Democrats and independent voters for the nomination in 1968. In percentages the figures were Kennedy 40, Johnson 38 among Democrats and Kennedy 38, Johnson 24 among independents.

But popularity ratings are subject to the fickle winds of change. They could blow from Viet Nam, for example.

If the war were to take a visible turn for the better, if some concrete development indicated definite progress toward a settlement, the president's rating most probably would rise again above Kennedy's.

For it appears that a major factor in the spectacular growth of Kennedy's prestige has been the positions he has taken on Viet Nam in particular and the problem of peace in general.

This is what he said on one phase of the Vietnamese problem:

"Whatever the exact status of the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) — puppet or partly independent — any negotiated settlement must accept the fact that there are discontented elements in South Viet Nam, Communist and non - Communist, who desire to change the existing political and economic system of that country. . . . To admit them to a share of power and responsibility is at the heart of the hope for a negotiated settlement."

Similarly, Kennedy has questioned the wisdom of bombing North Viet Nam.

LINKED TO CHINESE

He has delivered some long and tightly - reasoned statements on approaches to disarmament and, linking the problem with Communist China, has said:

"China exists. China is a nuclear power, and without China's co - operation the proliferation of nuclear weapons may be beyond our capacity to control.

"It is therefore our responsibility to take the first step—to take every honorable step — to bring China to the table of discussion at Geneva, or to engage in bilateral discussions at a high level elsewhere. But this we have not done."

He gained some more popularity by taking a solidly liberal position on some domestic issues — the plight of American cities, for example. He said the administration is not doing enough for them.

Kennedy also is attractive to politicians for a simple reason —he is a winner, so far.

He piloted John F. Kennedy to the Democratic nomination and then the presidency in 1960. Against apparently long odds, he won overwhelmingly in the New York senatorial race in 1964.

It is little wonder that Democrats running for election next November clamor for Kennedy to come in and campaign for them.

KENNEDY
. . . and again 'no'

Kennedy: 'I'm Not Running'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Robert F. Kennedy will not run for president or vice-president in 1968 "under any foreseeable circumstances," The Washington Post quotes him as saying.

Kennedy said Sept. 1 he will support President Johnson and Vice-President Humphrey for re-election in 1968.

Speculation about Kennedy contending for the Democratic ticket in 1968 has grown as some recent polls rate his popularity above that of Johnson or Humphrey.

Booby Trap School Busy In Viet Nam

By ROBERT HART

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (Reuters) —. A coconut, an old fruit juice can, a broken branch of bamboo, a small wooden gate . . . all these may seem harmless enough objects, but to a United States marine fighting in South Viet Nam they may mean death or agonizing mutilation.

Any of these simple objects, and countless more, may conceal a Viet Cong booby trap.

To counter the Viet Cong's traditional skill in turning the harmless into the deadly, men of the 3rd Marine Division, stationed just to the south of this big northern base town of Da Nang, go through courses at the division's "land mine warfare school," where they are taught how to recognize guerrilla booby traps and watch for them.

Groups of "students" spend five hours of each day in the classroom, being introduced to the different kinds of Viet Cong devices. All have been taken from the battlefield.

WALK WITH DANGER

Then they walk through an area constructed as a typical, overgrown trail in the area. Here they meet the booby traps for themselves and see them in operation — only without the explosives which make them lethal.

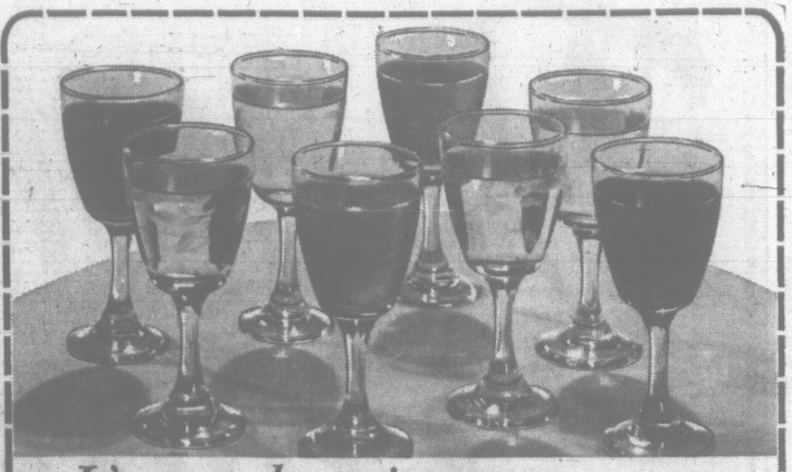

One of the eight instructors in the school led a party along the trail and took the marines through a small gate which had a mortar shell hidden at the foot of the gatepost.

Pointing out a piece of string hanging over a bar of the gate, he warned: "Any time you see a string hanging on a gate you can be sure that the thing is booby trapped. You open the gate, pull the string and up it goes."

Just inside the gate was a small piece of bamboo branch. It could have been packed with explosives ready to explode when touched or stepped on.

Farther down the trail were camouflaged pits containing vicious "punji" stakes, sometimes made of needle-sharp, barbed bamboo stuck into the ground, and sometimes of steel set in concrete. Either would rip through the sole of a boot — and the foot inside it.

Land mines with only an inch-square metal cap showing above the ground and wire-triggered grenades were hidden all along the path.

WINNING RATINGS WAR

Top Movies Bonanza for TV

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — No event in recent times has so cheered the film industry as when The Bridge on the River Kwai walloped its opposition during three hours on ABC television on a fortnight ago.

ABC gambled by paying $2,000,000 to Columbia Pictures for two network showings of Kwai. The gamble succeeded when Ford agreed to lay out $1,200,000, plus $600,000 for air time, to use the 1957 Academy Award winner as a showcase for its 1967 models.

The smashing success of Kwai touched off a gold rush for feature movies that have not yet been sold to television. CBS plunked down $800,000 apiece for 63 MGM films, including such recent films as The Sandpiper and Night of the Iguana, plus 18 that haven't even been made yet.

ABC paid $19,500,000 for 17 recent films made by 20th-Century Fox. The deal included the biggest payment in history for a single movie: $5,000,000 for two showings of Cleopatra in 1971 or after. The studio noted happily that the fee will push the $40,000,000 epic into the black.

More big-money transactions are likely to be announced in the future, since the networks need five movies a week to fill night time schedules.

The unprecedented record of The Sound of Music — now headed for a $100,000,000 rental — helped relieve bankers' doubts about investing in epics. The financiers are further impressed by whopping amounts paid for TV showing of The Agony and The Ecstasy, The Longest Day and other big-budget films.

U.S. Jets Hit During Stunt

INDIAN SPRINGS, Nev. (AP) — The two supersonic jets twisted in a spiral to 6,000 feet over the Nevada desert, then streaked toward each other upside down at 150 miles an hour.

The red, white and blue jets snaked around one another 20 feet apart—then closer. They hit and there was a shower of metal. Eyewitnesses said at least one of the F-100 supersabres caught fire.

They were aerobatic air force Thunderbirds, accustomed to close, precise flirting in the skies. But Wednesday, only one of the pilots lived to tell about it.

Capt. Robert Morgan, 32, of Pendleton, S.C., ejected, but his parachute didn't open soon enough. He hit the desert and was killed with his plane seat still strapped on.

DIED IN PLANE

His passenger, Maj. Frank Liethen, 36, of Appleton, Wis., in training to join the Thunderbirds team, rode the plane's rainbow arch to the ground and was killed in the explosion when it hit.

The pilot of the second plane, Capt. Robert Beckel of Walla Walla, Wash., coaxed his jet back to Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas.

The air force said it was a "tribute to his flying skill" that he landed the plane which had a damaged wing.

Morgan and Liethen were the seventh and eighth Thunderbird flyers killed in the tricky manoeuvres.

Sept. 2, a U.S. Navy jet of the Blue Angels aerial acrobatic team, performing at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, crashed and burned, killing the pilot.

FAILURE of Bank of Detroit to the tune of more than $1 million was a surprise to president James H. McGuire. Even more surprised were the 3,000 stockholders. It was one of the biggest failures since the depression years. A banking commissioner said the bank "simply owed more than it owned."

MOVIES GET BIGGER

A film is to be made of the Leatherstocking series of five full-length novels by Fenimore Cooper.

EX-ENVOY HITS KENNEDY TRIP

NEW YORK (AP)—A veteran U.S. career diplomat, now retired, Wednesday night criticized Senator Robert F. Kennedy's tour of South America, saying he could not imagine "a worse way to promote international goodwill."

Former ambassador Ellis O. Briggs said Kennedy spoke of the controversial Dominican Republic crisis "with loud forensic drumbeats" while State Secretary Dean Rusk "was at the same time tiptoeing across Copacabana beach doing his utmost not to arouse" Latin American foreign ministers meeting in Rio de Janeiro.

Briggs refrained from mentioning the New York Democrat by name but spoke of "a youthful senator" who toured several major Latin American republics last fall.

Briggs, in a speech prepared for a meeting of the Americas Foundation, said:

"In a reverse situation, an invading foreigner who presumed to harangue a North American audience about civil rights, the slowness of de-segregation, or inadequate taxes, would be lucky to escape with his shirt on his back. He would almost certainly lose his bombachas (a Spanish word for breeches)."

Briggs, 67, retired four years ago after a 41-year career in the U.S. diplomatic service. He was ambassador in four Latin American countries and was ambassador in Korea during the war and armistice negotiations. He has written many magazine

Cook Charged In Fire Deaths

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—A 35-year-old former U.S. Air Force cook was indicted Wednesday on 14 murder counts in connection with the Lane Hotel fire Sept. 12.

Charles Thessen was also indicted on 10 counts of second-degree arson. Thessen, of Anchorage, was arrested on a drunk driving charge Monday. He was charged with arson earlier Wednesday in connection with a fire in a downtown bar early Monday.

REGINA (CP)—Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp will be the featured speaker at the annual convention of the Saskatchewan Liberal Association Nov. 21-22 in Saskatoon, Premier Ross Thatcher said Wednesday.

Man with Grudge Set Jail Fire

A $50,000 barn-and-livestock fire at Wilkinson Road Jail Farm Wednesday was set by a man with a grudge, police said.

After Lorne Patrick Mitchell, 828 Courtney pleaded guilty Wednesday in central court to arson, Saanich Det.-Sgt. Robin Stewart told court the man had "a grudge against Wilkinson Road jail."

"He decided to burn down the jail."

"He left Victoria at 12 midnigt, hired a cab and went out to North Road," testified Det.-Sgt. Stewart.

"He entered a barn on Roy Road, setting fire to hay inside with toilet paper he had been carrying in his pocket."

Det.-Sgt. Stewart said the resulting blaze burned 44 piglets, four sows, 160 tons of hay and feed worth $50,000.

He said Mitchell had been drinking all evening and took "a box of pills."

He said Mitchell told him he had attempted suicide earlier in the week.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Mitchell had a criminal record, but that it was not readily available.

Magistrate William Ostler remanded Mitchell to Oct. 20 for pre-sentence and psychiatric reports.

Saanich fire department were called to the fire about 1 a.m. and still had hose lines out at 9 p.m. Wednesday night.

City Jet Pilot Survives Crash At Cold Lake

A Victoria jet pilot ejected from his CF-104 minutes before it crashed near Cold Lake, Alberta, Wednesday.

Flt. Lt. Russell Challoner, 32, son of Mrs. Eileen Challoner, 1663 Rockland, came down in some trees. He was unhurt.

An instructor at Canadian Forces Base, Cold Lake, he was on a mock bombing exercise when one engine in his aircraft failed.

RCAF officials said an investigation is underway.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, OCT. 13, 1966—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

Last year we bought a travel trailer in haste, latched it to the tail of our well - seasoned car, and scurried north into such misadventures as I wince even now to remember. This fall, though, it was a different story. The car that had failed us was thoroughly reconditioned and beefed up with overload springs. Our cargo was properly stowed at the hitch end of the trailer, where it belonged.

These precautions made the difference between a nightmare trip and a pleasant holiday, during which we got a chance to test the advantages and drawbacks of trailer vacationing as we handn't been able to before.

I'm not going to pose as an expert here. We are, in fact, still learning from experienced trailer people — a friendly fraternity always ready to help out beginners. However, in case any of you contemplate a next-year switch from tent canvas to aluminum roof, a few notes might come in handy.

Our rig is listed as a 13-footer. This is small as trailers go, expecially since three of those feet consist of tongue. A 10-foot living space approximately six wide demands certain qualities and concessions of those who propose to occupy it for even a night.

They must get along very well indeed with each other, and they have to be neat.

★

Trailer designers, a bunch clever as shipwrights, manage to pack an amazing lot of useful features into their rolling homes. In our three-yards-plus, we have more cupboard space than we need, under-seat lockers, fold-back upper bunk with mattress for two extra sleepers, three-burner propane stove with capacious ice box underneath, detachable table, and surprisingly roomy clothes closet.

Add to these features one propane lamp and three electrics, sink with running water from marine-type pump or tap, depending on location, also screened and curtained windows, and we ex-campers find ourselves in what seems an almost sinful state of vacation luxury.

Had we wished, we could have substituted a gas refrigerator for the ice box Some trailerites swear by these, others at them. We haven't got an oven; if a time should come when we want to spare fishing hours for roasting or baking, we'll acquire one of the clever folding ovens that sit atop a stove burner.

These are our basics, and so far we've got along very comfortably with them.

But if you have children still of an age to go holidaying with their parents, better think of a 16 or 18-footer.

These sizes offer more space. In them, your trailer may boast a shower, and the chances are that it will have, in a tiny room of its own, a facility which is good for an argument among trailer folk any day.

★

This is a toilet. The pros point out that it's darn convenient, especially in the middle of a rainy night.

The antis insist that trailer camps, without exception, have washrooms; that in wild country all one needs is a spade and the inclination, and that trailer toilets are nothing but a nuisance.

There are also the in-betweens, who compromise with ducky little commodes.

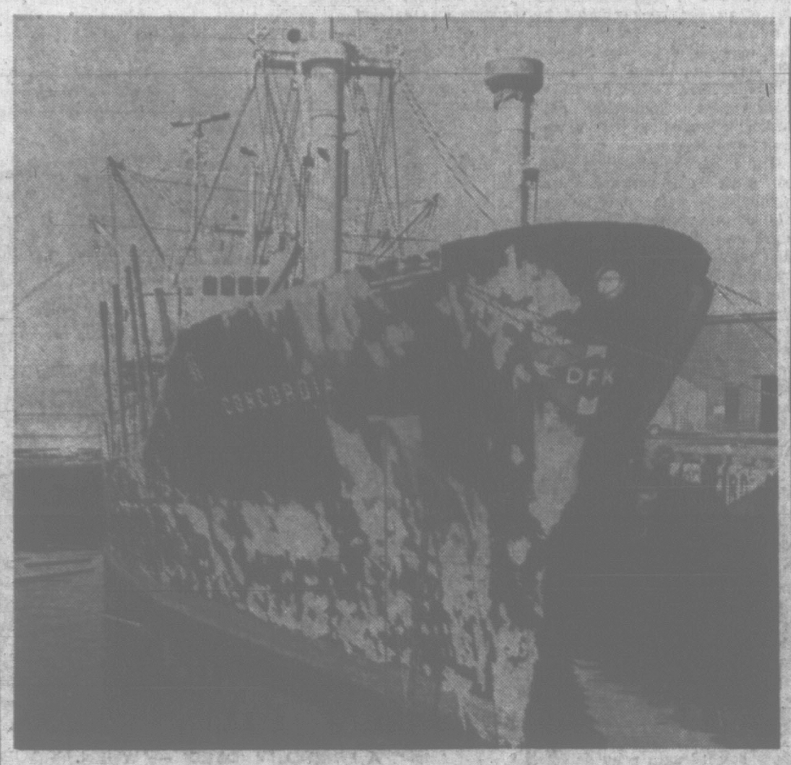

Here, I'm still too much of a greenhorn to deliver a verdict, and will only point out that one couple we met, west from Ottawa for a wander-year, have yet to initiate their trailer toilet. They use the space for storage.

Soiled clothes? Run them in to the nearest coin saundry, where you can also spin rain-soaked garments dry.

Want more warmth? Carry a clay flower pot, invert it over a burner, and you've got an effective makeshift furnace. Or you can instal a propane heater.

Propane, you'll learn, is clean and safe, and a standard bottle (that's the steel container mounted on the tongue) will last through the average two-week vacation.

For further dope, consult any of those friendly experts I mentioned . . . one or two of whom, I hope will write in.

Double Berth But Not Twins At 'Point'

Captain W. Tsoong sailed his grain ship, Concordia, into Ogden Point today — and found he'd been beaten to the gun by a wood (lumber) ship.

There, moored in the next berth, was the Concordia.

He could well be excused for thinking he'd got a case of seeing double. But he hadn't.

For the first time in Ogden Point's history, two ships with the same name had tied up on the same day.

Capt. Tsoong's ship (right) is here to load grain for Japan. Of Monrovian registry, the 8,107 gross ton vessel, was built in 1945.

The other Concordia (above) skippered by Capt. P. Haagensen, is loading lumber for Holland. Of Danish registry, she is 3,449 gross ton and was built in 1964.

A shipping agent estimated the odds of two ships with the same name tying up in the same port at the same time at a million to one against.

Lloyd's register shows six Concordias in the world.

RECALLING ISLAND-MAINLAND UNION

Nov. 20 Proclaimed Day of Thanks

The provincial cabinet today proclaimed Sunday, November 20 "as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God" to commemorate the union of Vancouver Island and Mainland British Columbia 100 years ago.

The actual union took place on a November 19, but the feature event of this Centennial year was scheduled for the nearest Sunday so that all churches could hold a common thanksgiving.

The cabinet urged that its proclamation be read to all congregations November 20 by all clergymen throughout the province because:

"It is considered to be and is deemed right and proper that the citizens of British Columbia should be afforded the opportunity humbly to render thanks to Almighty God for the generous gifts of nature and for the blessings of peace and prosperity with which their province has been so richly endowed and to combine in simultaneous prayer for the continuation of such blessings."

THIS WAS FROSTY THURSDAY

Well, nobody waved goodbye, but summer's good and gone.

Cars wore white frosting this morning and summer flowers caught a nasty chill as the thermometer nudged the freezing point.

The low overnight was 33 bitter degrees, the coldest so far this fall season.

Friday will be warmer, but —you guessed it—only after a night of rain and cloud.

Union Merger Seeks Stability For Shipyards

One Union Per Yard Aim of Negotiations

By AB KENT

Management efforts to have the major unions decertified for bargaining purposes appear to be in conflict with union efforts to be recertified under a joint authority.

Spokesmen for both sides agree that current applications by management and the Joint Shipyard Conference of unions before the Labor Relations Board would have the same effect.

The shipyards want the largest of some 17 shipyard trade unions decertified in favor of a single union at each yard—Yarrows, Victoria Machinery Depot and Burrard Drydock.

An application is before the LRB to this end, but the unusual move is considered by observers to have little chance of approval.

The other application, deadline for submission being Friday, seeks to have joint certification for bargaining purposes on behalf of all the shipbuilding trades.

SINGLE CONTRACT

Unions so named on a certificate would then delegate bargaining to the Joint Shipyard Conference.

All but two unions — pipefitters and electricians — have agreed to this proposal.

It is thought that management also would endorse such an arrangement to bring bargaining under more firm control.

Dick Mahoney, bargaining spokesman for the shipyards, explained:

"What we are trying to do is achieve joint bargaining policy so we don't have to face splinter groups."

HOLDOUTS

He referred to recent union holdouts that have kept shipyards closed in strike action even though a majority of other unions have accepted settlement terms.

"This is the only way it could be done from a company point of view," Mr. Mahoney said in defence of the companies' application.

He said he felt the Joint Conference submission would accomplish the same end, however.

"As long as there is the possibility of splinter strikes, they are going to destroy the shipyards in British Columbia," he said.

Andy Manson, a spokesman for the Joint Conference, said he thought the LRB hearing on its application would come by the end of this month.

But meanwhile, he said, 3½-months-old negotiations with the companies continue on the traditional basis, with the Joint Conference acting for the unions, with unions abiding by recommendations only voluntarily.

First meeting with government conciliation officer Jack Sherlock was held in Vancouver Wednesday and a further meeting in Victoria is set for Monday.

HARBOR PROJECT

Mayor Plans Bid for Aid From Ottawa

Mayor A. W. Toone said today he would make an appeal for joint Inner Harbor development when he visits Ottawa at the end of October.

He referred to improvements along the Causeway necessitated by pressure of traffic and more active use of the harbor by aircraft.

Plans for Causeway improvement to allow for expanded traffic flow and pedestrian access have been in the talking stage for several years.

The city needs senior government aid in order to initiate the project.

The mayor said he hoped to talk to federal Labor Minister John Nicholson when he visits Victoria Tuesday to address a joint Chamber of Commerce-Kiwanis Club meeting.

TO OPEN HELIPORT

Immediately following the meeting at Empress Hotel the mayor and club members will go by car and bus to Industrial Reserve overlooking the harbor for the opening by Mayor Toone of the city's new heliport.

The mayor is expected to stress the importance of transportation and harbor development in the near future when he declares the landing pad officially open.

Captial Region Planning Board director Tony Roberts will give a presentation on the site relating to the proposed Victoria West freeway system that will be linked with a bridge to James Bay.

A Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. craft will use the pad and provide chamber members with courtesy flights.

Cabinet Backs Dump Permit At Buttle Lake

Cabinet ministers appear satisfied with the Pollution Control Board's decision giving Western Mines Ltd. a permit to dump mine tailings into Buttle Lake without a public hearing first.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan this morning said he had no jurisdiction over the board so he would not comment on its action except to say he would be willing to drink the lake water on trust.

He pointed out the board's permit requires the mine to pipe its tailings into the lake at the 120-foot depth.

"I'll stand there and drink water off the surface any day of the week," he said.

MANY SAFEGUARDS

Earlier, Ray Williston, who is responsible for the pollution control board as water resources minister, said the board had detailed many requirements in the permit to ensure it was safe.

Consequently, he said, he did not see much point in the cabinet reviewing the board's decision because the ministers did not have expert knowledge.

He said neither laymen "who are steaming this up with emotion" nor cabinet ministers are in a position to tell the board's experts "that they don't know their own business."

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi expressed a similar view this week.

Ask The Times

Q. Who now has the greater slice of the transport and haulage market — truck or train? B.L.

A. According to statistics of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, the railways are far ahead in total ton-miles shipped, about two to one. But truck carrier shipments slightly exceed railways in total tons shipped.

Q. How can I get the shine back on my fishing spoons and spinners? H.M.

A. A Times fishing expert suggests you soak the lures in water in which potatoes have been boiled.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Murder Question Remains Open As Police, Jury Reports Conflict

Saanich police and a coroner's jury have issued contradictory reports in the death last month of Mrs. Nancy M. Beggs.

The jury Wednesday gave a verdict of murder.

But Chief W. A. Pearson today said, "We're inclined to think it's an accidental death."

He indicated that all information pertinent to the case had not been made available to the jury.

"We had drawn a number of conclusions on the case before the inquest," he said. He added, there were reasons for keeping these findings confidential.

"For a number of reasons, we don't think it's murder, but we'll continue our investigations."

The chief said two detectives have been assigned to continue probing into the death.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre could not be reached today to comment on the suggestion that all facts known to the police had not been made known to the inquest jury.

Mrs. Beggs, an 86-year-old Saanich woman was killed "by strangulation by a cord placed around her neck by a person or persons unknown," the jury's verdict read. She was found dead in her house Sept. 3.

The jury, in the third sitting of the inquest, agreed also that death was due to asphyxia, and that no finding as to the exact time of death could reasonably be made.

A final witness in the inquest was a Vancouver RCMP crime lab technician, Mrs. Monica Simondsen, who said she had found small quantities of blood on a dress and a piece of linoleum taken from the Beggs house.

She said the blood, which on the dress was on the right shoulder, "was of insufficient quantity to determine the group."

She further said she presumed it was human blood, although she said the possibility that it was ape or monkey blood was not ruled out.

Robert Beggs, son of the deceased woman, who found her body Sept. 3, told the jury his mother kept no pets of any kind.

'QUITE A JOB'

Coroner Jorre de St. Jorre told the jury in giving his charge to them that they had "quite a job."

He said the panel had to answer "just why that cord was around her neck — and how it came to be there."

But the coroner called "fanciful" the theory that she could have put it around her neck herself.

"There is no evidence for suicide," he said.

"And there is no evidence that points to anybody as the killer."

BONE BROKEN

A pathologist's report at an earlier hearing revealed Mrs. Beggs had a bone broken in her throat and bruising about the throat. There was also medical evidence that she had been hit or had fallen on her head.

Mrs. Beggs' body was found lying on the floor of her spare bedroom in her house at 1812 Feltham St.

A 10-ft. 2-in. electric cord was found wrapped about her neck.

While evidence was given that the woman left a large estate, it was disclosed that money on the premises was not taken.

False Claims For Benefits 'Must Stop'

A man who made seven false statements to collect unemployment insurance will wait a week in jail before being sentenced.

Carl Berikoff, 2943 Bridge Street, admitted in central court today he collected $116 in illegal benefits between April 24 and July 31 this year. In each case he had claimed he received no income when he had earned from $10 to $50 during the weeks he filed a claim.

Berikoff was remanded in custody for sentence Thursday after he pleaded guilty to all seven charges. He has since repaid the money he collected illegally.

"This is another type of offence increasing in leaps and bounds," said Magistrate Ostler. "It's got to stop."

Late Submission Of Payroll Tax Costs Firm $300

A company which was late in forwarding employees' income tax deductions to the government was fined $300 today.

Anthony Penn, representing Penn Holdings Ltd., 625 Fort St., pleaded guilty in central court to the firm's second offence in the past 22 months.

He said the employee charged with the task had failed to remit the $148.28 by the July 15 deadline.

'STUDY SUBJECT' BEFORE SPEAKING

A vice-president of the Junior Chamber of Canada Wednesday warned Victoria Jaycees that "if young people don't use their voice, they will lose it."

Russell Cooper, an Edmonton Trust Company executive and former president of the Toronto Junior Board of Trade urged that the Jaycee movement take an active and critical interest in the country's affairs.

"If young people are disappointed in what is going on around them, it is as much their fault as anyone's."

Mr. Cooper, urging a new tack for the young men's organization, said he hoped every Junior Chamber would undertake a serious study of some national problem.

He cited the research undertaken by some chambers in the past — papers on governmental sociological and economic problems.

"And if these studies are well-conceived and seriously carried out they can be presented to legislative bodies.

"God only knows, they might welcome our opinions."

But he said the rebirth of interest in national affairs will have to be accompanied by a selective and careful reading of current affairs.

"With radio, television and the papers presenting 16 sides of a question to us, we'll have to know something to begin with.

"The future," he said, "depends on it."

Four Missing Schoolgirls Found on Boat at Mill Bay

Four Victoria schoolgirls missing in an 18-foot outboard boat since dark Wednesday were located at 11:30 this morning on a beach near Mill Bay.

An Air-Sea Rescue Albatross aircraft from Comox spotted the girls' boat soon after a full-scale search of the Gulf Islands and Georgia Strait had begun.

Clare Tweedal, 17, Diane Trow, 14, Dawn McKechnie, 12, and Trudy Boye, 12, left from Hall's Boathouse Saanich Inlet, in a boat belonging to D. M. McKechnie, 3420 Veteran, the father of one of the girls, about 7 p.m.

GIVING time and energy to help others are these newly-elected Junior Red Cross executives. They'll plan activities of school clubs, organize spare-time hospital helpers, collect for Christmas hampers and for needy children overseas. From left are Maxine Boyd, publicity, Oak Bay Senior Secondary; Mary Bigelow, publicity, Norfolk House; Lynne Ingram, treasurer, S. J. Willis; Dan McGregor, president, Mount View; Ann Hellyer, secretary, S. J. Willis, and Adrienne Chan, vice-president, Victoria Senior Secondary. Busy year of activities is planned. Nature Ruled by Patterns

Just as humans conform to patterns of activities, so does nature to a large extent, Dr. G. Clifford Carl told the Women's Canadian Club Wednesday.

Speaking on "Pacific Patterns" at the meeting in the Empress Hotel, Dr. Carl, director of the Provincial Museum, went on to tell of the two basic groups of forces in nature which impose these patterns. The first, he said, is "mechanical, involving form and structure." The second, he continued, is more complex, involving "behavior and association between plants and animals."

As an example of "mechanical" patterns, Dr. Carl used the bee's honeycomb as an illustration, explaining that the cells built by the bee were originally round but natural forces had shaped it into a six-sided figure.

"The second type," he said "is less obvious" — behavior patterns seem to be psychic, and he used migration of birds as an example. He explained that some animals have an imaginary "clock" inside them, which "tells" them when to feed, to sleep, or in the cases of birds, when it is time to migrate. He told of experiments which prove this theory and added that many work on the day and night system.

Association patterns, he said, can be divided into four categories: Where two plants or animals living together derive benefit from one another; where one tolerates and the other benefits; where one uses the other for food without drastically harming the 'host,' and last, where one hunts and kills another for food.

Where can these patterns be found? "Look in your own backyard — or go to the seashore." Dr. Carl showed a film illustrating his address showing examples of patterns with sea animals and plants.

Many of the patterns, he said, were imposed by natural forces, the wind, rain and tides which left special physical patterns on the shore.

He also told of the lives of many of these creatures, explaining how "patterns" imposed by the forces of nature were responsible for their feeding, defence and life habits.

The speaker was introduced by president Mrs. H. H. Youson and thanked by Mrs. D. Leslie Macdonell.

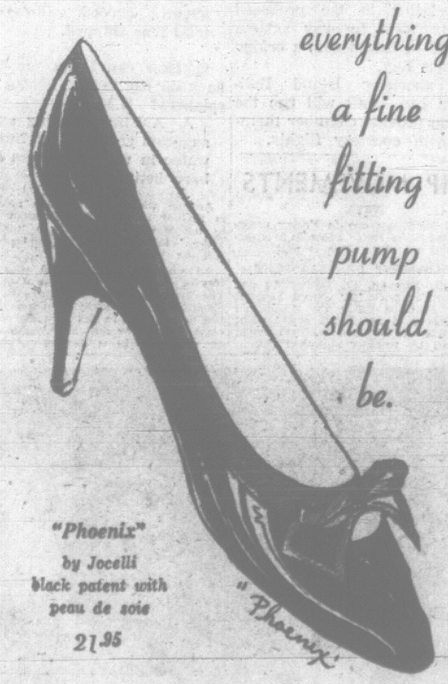

A TWO-DOLLAR HAIRCUT FOR $1.75

One reason why the price of a haircut was raised to $2.00 recently is the fact that most barbershops have too much idle time. We have cut our idle time to the bare minimum by our haircuts-by-appointment system. To cut out the last bit of it, we offer the following: If you make your appointment AT LEAST one day in advance, you get a two-dollar haircut for $1.75.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Germ-Free Romeo Simply Unkissable

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have met a remarkable man who does not believe in the delightful practice of kissing for the simple reason that it spreads germs. He is sincere and practices his belief to the fullest. How can a normal man resist the urge to kiss someone he cares deeply for? Surely there must be some temptation!

Or do you think this is a characteristic to be admired? A victory of intelligence over the emotions? Personally I would risk getting a few delicious germs, but he doesn't feel that way about it. What do you think? Sign this:

KISSABLE BUT UNKISSED

DEAR UNKISSED: I'm all for a clean relationship, but this is ridiculous. A kissless romance, as I see it, is not likely to hatch into anything as intimate as marriage, where it's share and share alike, germs included. So if that's what you had in mind, kiss this germ-conscious Romeo good-bye. And be careful not to breathe on him.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law problem is different from any I have ever seen in your column. She can't do enough for me. When I call and invite her and dad here for dinner she says, "It's too much work for you — come here instead." And she won't take no for an answer. So we go, and she always sends us home loaded with tasty leftovers. She is constantly sending my husband and me gifts.

She sounds perfect, doesn't she? Well, she's far from it. On two occasions I've bought her gifts. She returned both of them and credited them to MY account. She's the most ungracious guest I have ever known.

When I finally got her to come over one afternoon, she sat with her coat on and stayed only a few minutes. She wouldn't even have a cup of tea because she didn't want to put me to any trouble. What on earth is wrong with her?

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: She means well, but she has never learned how to accept anything graciously. The burden of gratitude is too heavy for her to say "thank you." I doubt if she'll ever change. So try to understand her.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a mother who would entertain her sewing club by reading them the letters her son received from his girl friend? The son was away fighting a war at the time, and the girl friend happened to be MY DAUGHTER!

When I heard this, my blood just boiled. It was back in 1943, but every time I think about it I get upset all over again.

My daughter is married and I don't know what happened to the boy, but I still think that mother had her nerve. Every so often I get the strongest urge to call this woman up and give her a piece of my mind. Should I?

STILL MAD

DEAR STILL: No.

LeBEDIS-HAWES WEDDING VOWS HEARD

COUPLE TO LIVE IN MONTREAL

Carnations and stephanotis surrounded the orchid which topped an heirloom maroon velvet prayer book carried by Emily Margaret Hawes, Saturday evening, when she became the bride of Stanley Thomas LeBedis, New York. The prayer book was "something old" which belonged to her great-great-grandfather.

The bride's floor-length gown of white silk organza was highlighted with embroidered lily of the valley. The A-line skirt was slightly en train and the empire-line bodice was fashioned with lily point sleeves. She topped her ensemble with a sleeveless coat, draped from bridal bows at the shoulders and sweeping back to a train. Her veil misted softly to her fingertips from a coronet of silk organza and she wore her grandmother's pearls as jewelry.

AUTUMN THEME

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Hawes, 1026 Monterey Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanislaus LeBedis of Whitecraigs, Renfrewshire, Scotland. Autumn floral arrangements decorated Metropolitan United Church for the service at which Rev. A. E. King officiated. Mr. Hawes gave his daughter in marriage.

During the ceremony, organist E. Boothroyd accompanied soloist John Dunbar.

The bride's trio of attendants chose street-length peau de soie gowns in pale green, gold and burnt orange tones. Their coronet headpieces matched their outfits and they carried bouquets of bronze and gold chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Ken Hawes, Edmonton, was matron of honor for her sister-in-law, and the bride's sisters, the Misses Darlene and Dorcas Hawes, were bridesmaids.

Best man was George Benson, Vancouver; and Ken Hawes, the bride's brother, and Art John, Sidney, were ushers.

The autumn theme of the wedding was carried out in the floral decorations, arranged by Mrs. A. Bailey at the reception following in the home of the bride's parents. The three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table was flanked by heirloom silver candelabra and topped with yellow roses. Ivan Peetz proposed the toast to the bride.

Beige Persian lamb trimmed the collar and cuffs of the beige French gabardine suit worn by the new Mrs. LeBedis for travelling on honeymoon to Vera Cruz, Mexico. She complemented the outfit with dark brown suede accessories. The couple will be making their home in Montreal, P.Q.

Heirloom Bridal Garter Becomes Token for Geraldine O'Donnell

A wedding garter, an heirloom of the groom's family, fulfilled the traditions of "something old" and "something borrowed" for Geraldine Alfreda O'Donnell, recently, when she became the bride of Brian David Carmichael, Smithers, B.C.

The bride's exquisite floor-length gown was of white bengaline, accented with wide bands of hand-embroidered lace highlighting the belled skirt. The lace was repeated on the detachable train. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a round scalloped neckline and the lace sleeves ended in lily points. A tiara of sequins and pearls on a petalled base held her shoulder-length bouffant veil and she carried a white Bible, topped with an arrangement of white roses and velvet streamers. The groom's gift of culture pearl earrings and teardrop necklace was her only jewelry accent.

Arrangements of chrysanthemums in an autumn color theme decorated St. George the Martyr Church when Canon George Biddle heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley O'Donnell of Fort Smith, NWT, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Carmichael, 1931 Mayfair Drive, Victoria.

W. Watmough, Fraser Lake, B.C., gave the bride in marriage, and during the signing of the register, organist Jim Furmston played "Hawaiian Wedding Song."

A street-length gown of turquoise silk bengaline, topped with a matching lace coat, was worn by matron of honor Mrs. O. Sandercott, Burns Lake, B.C. Bridesmaid Miss Sharon Sandercott, also of Burns Lake, was in a similar outfit in pale turquoise brocade, topped with a lace coat.

GIFTS OF PEARLS

Jewelry was the bride's gifts of pearl necklaces and earrings, and they carried crescent bouquets of chrysanthemums in autumn shades.

The little flower girl Jean Carmichael, sister of the groom, was in a frock of yellow nylon, highlighted with pearls on the bodice. She wore autumn flowers in her hair to match the flowers in the basket she carried. Her jewelry was the bride's gift of a gold locket.

Ian D. Carmichael was best man for his brother, and ushering the guests to their pews were Michael Symons, Smithers, and Barrie Bowes.

Arrangements of yellow roses, tulle and yellow candles in heirloom silver candelabra surrounded the wedding cake which centred the head table at the reception following in Holyrood House. Edward (Ned) Symons proposed the toast to the bride and the groom's 12-year-old brother, Bruce Carmichael, was in charge of the guest book.

The newlyweds will live in Smithers following a honeymoon motoring through the Okanagan to Edmonton, where they will visit the bride's family, presently en route to Ottawa to make their home.

For travelling, the new Mrs. Carmichael donned a princess-line dress of navy blue crepe, accented with white lace cuffs and collar. She complemented the outfit with a black-trimmed hat and coat and black patent accessories. A white rose corsage completed the outfit.

Bazaar and Tea Raises $250

The sum of $250 was realized when Victoria Purple Star No. 104 held a successful fall bazaar and tea in The Bay's Douglas Room. Worthy mistress Mrs. L. Hamilton introduced Miss Elizabeth Forbes who opened the affair. Each was presented with corsages by Mrs. E. King, who with Mrs. O. McKay, convened the event.

Mrs. H. Weeds and Mrs. J. Johnston convened afternoon tea, assisted by a committee of members. A variety of items kept guests busy shopping at the various stalls.

Stall conveners were: Home cooking, Mrs. R. Alexander and Mrs. F. Smith; fancywork, Mrs. G. Davies and Mrs. E. Bousfield; aprons, Mrs. N. Wilson and Mrs. S. Patterson; novelties, Mrs. O. McKay; white elephants, Mrs. M. Joyce and Mrs. M. Townsend; centennial lavender lady, Mrs. M. Nicol; doll raffle, Mrs. V. Keatley. Mrs. B. Blevins was in charge of receipts.

Chemainus Official To Open Bazaar

Mrs. Lucille Hatton, Chemainus, district deputy grand chief of District No. 5, will officially open the fall bazaar of Island Temple No. 8, Pythian Sisters, to be held in the lower auditorium of the K of P Hall, 723 Cormorant Street, this Saturday.

A smorgasbord luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and afternoon tea from 2 to 4 p.m. Stalls will feature home cooking, candy, fancywork, a variety of aprons, novelties of all kinds and lucky parcels. There will be a penny auction, several raffles and a door prize.

General conveners are Mrs. V. Barry and Mrs. C. Mullen. Guests will be received by most excellent chief Mrs. E. Rogers.

SHOPPING GUIDE

From Pan to Platter Without Any Slips

By Penny Saver

I have a special drawer in my cupboard for bent forks. These are not just ordinary bent forks—they were twisted and curved in the process of lifting a heavy roast or bird from the roasting pan to the serving platter. I keep them there just for spite. Each one reminds me of the dandy times I used to have with meat or fowl over 10 pounds in weight. Some tell slippery tales of greasy turkeys that went sliding down the counter top to land "plop" into the sink. They almost tell of the feast that never was, but things never get quite that bad!

I found a type of rack and lifter that takes the skill out of lifting meats from the roaster. There is a wire lifting handle that is attached to the rack on both sides. When the meat is done, simply lift from the roaster. All the drippings are left in the pan for gravy, and your meat is unmarked by fork gouges.

The rack fits most pans and sells for $1.59. Don't spend your time fiddling with a heavy roast trying to get it onto the platter. Use this device instead.

There's one item that no housewife can afford to ignore when it comes to saving time. This is a boot tray that indirectly protects floors from dirt and water marks. Place this molded rubber mat by the door. It will hold a whole family of rubber boots. The bottom is ribbed, with a reinforced rim. All the rain and mud on the boots just stays in the tray and doesn't touch your floor. Put one at your front and back doors. Price is $1.99.

Some rainy days are meant for relaxing indoors. On those afternoons lunch is probably coffee or hot chocolate, with a tasty sandwich beside it. I found the ideal coffee and sandwich sets in a shop I was in today. There are four coffee mugs and sandwich plates made of ovenproof, decorative pottery. Use them for snacks or morning coffee parties. The set is priced at $5.95.

Looking for a shower gift item? Give Penny a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where she shopped for these.

Mr. and Mrs. Herold Ranson, 395 Stannard Avenue, announce the engagement of their younger daughter, Catherine, to Mr. Alexander Metcalf, son of Mrs. P. Metcalf, of Vancouver. WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Your Ideas on Whether You Should Tell Your True Age

A couple of months ago I asked my readers to write and tell me whether or not they think a woman should tell her real age. I printed a few answers, but now I am deluged with wonderful letters. I am keeping some of them to use as kickoffs for future columns. Today I am bringing you a few quotes from these letters, and you can make up your mind — whether to tell your age or not.

Lowman

1. "Just for fun I thought I would answer your request for thoughts about whether a woman should tell her age.

"I hate to give my age to people for no good reason. I truly feel that you are as old as you feel and look, but I don't like being stuck in a particular 'slot' just because I was born in a certain year. I don't mind being ribbed about not telling my age. I would rather keep it that way. Most people think I am quite a lot younger than I am and I like to keep them guessing."

2. "I can never remember my age because it is always changing and because I really don't care how old I am. I can, however, remember the date of my birth. If anyone asks me my age, I give them my birth date. If the number of years between that date and this one are important enough to them, they can figure it out."

3. "On the subject of age; I never think of myself as young or old. If someone asks me pointblank how old I am, I tell them. I am 34 but am often mistaken for a teen-ager. I attribute this to never giving age a thought."

4. "I have just celebrated my 80th birthday and what a gay time I had! My family and friends are wonderful, and I have gotten a real thrill out of saying, yes, it is my 80th birthday! Isn't it wonderful?"

5. "On this matter of whether a woman should tell her age or not, I think it depends on the situation. If she is applying for a driver's license, or something like that of course she should tell her real age. On the other hand, if the case is not official, knock off a few years. It really doesn't matter to anyone but you. But, don't knock off more than are believable."

6. "I am going to be a wonderful age this fall — 39. I measure my waistline, do daily dozens, dye my hair when I feel like it, and watch the styles. But — OH — I enjoy a certain serenity that is mine at this age which I longed for in my 20s. With a dream in my mind and a laugh in my heart, and some perspiration on my brow, I'll try for 80 and admit every blessed year."

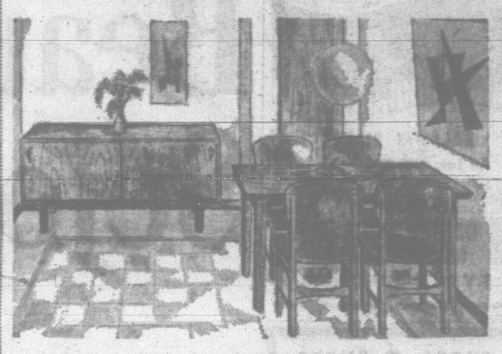

I wish I could print more of these letters, but they will be sneaking into my column off and on.

FOR AUSTRALIA

Far East Now The Near North

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN

MANILA, The Philippines (AP)—Australia's presence at the Manila conference on Viet Nam will be another demonstration that the island continent's historic isolation from Asia is over.

Australia is the third largest foreign contributor to the Viet Nam war effort, an indication of its emergence since the Second World War as a political and economic force in Asia.

Before the Japanese gobbled up Southeast Asia, Australia had little or no contact with the area it called the Far East. Today the Far East is called the Near North and Australians are aware of what is going on among the 1,500,000,000 persons who live within 4,000 miles of the land down under.

The Aussies have 4,500 troops in South Viet Nam, a large air base at Butterworth near Penang on the west coast of Malaysia and jet fighter units in northeast Thailand.

Australia has maintained 4,000 men in Malaysia for almost 10 years. They first helped put down the Communist terrorist movement in the '50s and later fought Indonesian guerrillas in the confrontation between Malaysia and Indonesia.

BOOST ASIAN TRADE

But it is in the field of trade that the Australians are making the biggest impact. Asia now accounts for 30 per cent of Australia's total overseas trade. In 10 years trade with Asia has leaped to $1,580,000,000 from $620,000,000.

Japan accounts for 45 per cent of this trade. It is Australia's best customer after Britain.

Although Australia has a population of only 12,000,000 it is starting to export capital and invest it in joint ventures in Asia, notably in Malaysia, Thailand and the Philippines.

In two decades Australia has handed out close to $1,000,000,000 in aid to Asian countries under such schemes as the Colombo Plan and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. Australia gives its aid as no-strings-attached grants which do not have to be repaid.

It is also spending $22,000,000 in a military assistance program with Malaysia.

BUILD UP ARMY

The army is being built up to 40,000 men in anticipation of a long haul in Viet Nam and the defence budget was increased this year to $864,000,000 with the prospect that it will reach $1,000,000,000 within 10 years.

The navy has ordered U.S. Skyhawk bombers and Tracker anti-submarine aircraft.

The air force also has ordered 24 F-111As, designed to carry nuclear weapons.

Australia's thorniest political problem in Asia is its restrictive immigration law, known as the "white Australia policy."

Instances where the law has been applied without too much thought as to its consequences have provoked criticism, particularly in the Philippines.

Despite the White Australia policy, Australia has maintained strong ties with the anti-Communist nations in Asia. At the same time it is selling huge quantities of wheat to China, which it does not recognize diplomatically.

An Australian diplomat in Bangkok says:

"We are still a small country. Give us a few more years of development and then we will be able to ease the restrictions on Asian immigration."

FREEDOMITE WOMEN FORCE-FED

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Two Doukhobor women who went on a hunger strike last April in Kingston Prison for Women are still being force-fed in hospital.

Mary Malakoff and Mary Astaforoff, both in their mid-50s, started the strike to protest five-year sentences for arson.

Victor Richmond, regional director of prison, said the women receive about 2,000 calories a day through nasal tubes.

"It's sufficient to sustain them. Their condition appears to be weak but satisfactory," he said.

The women are members of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect from Krestova, B.C.

TRAIN CROSS SAFETY PLAN REQUESTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Rene Emard, Liberal MP for Vaudreuil-Soulanges, asks in a motion placed on the Commons order paper for a "foolproof system of protection" at all level crossings, especially in urban centres.

Nineteen persons were killed at Dorion, Que., Friday night in a level crossing collision between a bus and a CNR freight train.

Mr. Emard's motion said security measures should be taken at all level crossings pending establishment of a "foolproof system."

EDWIN ALONZO BOYD

Convict Awaits Verdict on Parole

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Once Canada's most-wanted criminal, Edwin Alonzo Boyd must wait a while to learn whether he can obtain a parole from his life term at Kingston penitentiary.

"There has been no change in the status there and no decision has been reached yet," says T. George Street, chairman of the national parole board. He was attending a meeting at the penitentiary staff college.

Last November a parole board member said it would be at least a year before the board decided in the case.

It would be the 52-year-old Boyd's second parole. Sentenced after a series of bank holdups in 1951, he broke out of jail twice before being recaptured and brought here. His first parole came after he served 10 years, in October, 1962.

But he was back here four months later because of a series of parole violations, unauthorized debts and his association with a 16-year-old Toronto girl.

Seat for China Road to Peace?

By DON HARVEY

EDMONTON (CP)—A Canadian specialist in South east Asian affairs said here that Communist China must be seated in the United Nations before a trend can start to end the war in Viet Nam.

Delivering a lecture in memory of Henry Marshall Tory, the University of Alberta's first president, Chester Ronning drew both laughter and applause from the crowd of 900 when he said:

"We should not find too much fault with either the Chinese or the Americans if by now they have concluded that we need not be taken too seriously when we talk about recognizing Communist China. Could it be that our good intentions are paving the way to further delays and that the American tortoise may yet win the diplomatic race with the Canadian rabbit to recognize China?"

Again he was applauded when he recalled that as Canadian charges d'affairs in Nanking, former Chinese capital, he had urged the Canadian government in 1949 to recognize the new regime.

". . . I advocated by cable that Canada should not only recognize the new regime, but added that the benefits to be derived from recognition would be dissipated inversely as the square of the length of time it took to reach a favorable decision.

"I should not remind you of this prediction in the same breath that I advocate recognition of China today since mathematical calculation applied to my prediction would have reduced the benefits to be derived pretty close to zero long ago."

Unfortunately Canada has failed to impress China "chiefly because we have not carried out our intentions to recognize the Peoples' Republic of China and are considered to be a satellite of the United States," he said.

"For Canada the question is no longer should China be recognied and brought into the UN, but only when. In my opinion, if we do not realize that time is of the essence because of the dangerous possibilities associated with the war in Viet Nam, there may soon be no opportunity even to decide when."

Mr. Ronning, who twice has served as Canadian peace envoy to Hanoi and Saigon, said "it is our relations with the U.S. which give us good reason for the utmost caution in reaching a decision."

Canada and the U.S. share the same continent, yet "it is the attitude of the U.S. which constitutes our most serious difficulty."

Mr. Ronning, who was born in China in 1894 of missionary parents, said that "if and when" China becomes involved in the Viet Nam war "it will be too late" to discuss UN or Canadian recognition of the country. But China "will probably not go beyond (providing) military aid unless Peking decides that China's national security is threatened."

POSSIBILITY EXISTS

Based on her experience in helping to end the Korean conflict and on what she has already done in opening a channel to North Viet Nam, "there is a real possibility for Canada to make a modest beginning to reverse the present dangerous trend to disaster," he said.

"Quiet diplomacy in high places . . . is still the most effective way of achieving results . . . there are times when a responsible government official can be most effective when he uses quiet diplomacy to deal with foreign government officials."

In considering the future of Viet Nam attention must be focussed on Peking because ". . . Viet Nam is contiguous to China."

The only logical alternative to continuing the war if China becomes involved "would be to escalate the ground war . . . by the use of nuclear weapons," he said.

Canada's trade relations with China could be upset "very quickly if Canada as a middle power fails to accept its share of responsibility in maintaining stability in Asia, which is possible only by establishing the diplomatic relations which enables Canada to preserve the ability to deal effectively with important nations."

CONTROVERSIAL former Episcopal Bishop of California, James A. Pike resigned today as auxiliary bishop of the Episcopal Anglican diocese of California. He said he was resigning so that his successor will not be officially involved in his dispute with Rt. Rev. Henry Louttit, Bishop of South Florida. Bishop Louttit has filed heresy charges against Pike.

Head Injury Fatal

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — R. Roland Reynolds, 29, a member of the Reynolds metals family, died Wednesday of massive head injuries he received when he walked into a whirling airplane propeller.

NDP GAINS AS PARTIES QUARREL

EDMONTON (CP)—Dalton Camp, president of the Progressive party, said today both old-line parties are in danger of losing support to the New Democrats.

Mr. Camp said both federal Liberals and Conservatives could take a lesson from what happened in the Pincher Creek-Crows Nest provincial byelection Oct. 6.

The NDP won the byelection, taking the seat from the Social Credit party, and both Liberal and Conservative candidates finished well back.

"The old parties are in such a state that the NDP is a place people can put their protests," said Mr. Camp.

Damage Toll Mounts In Wake of Big Wind

VALLES, Mexico (AP)—Estimates of the damage from hurricane Inez mounted today in northeast Mexico. The oil port of Tampico, without power and short of food, faced a new threat from the swollen Panuco River.

The Mexican government sent tons of food, clothing and medicine into stricken Tamaulipas state and helicopters searched remote rangelands where scores were reported stranded by flood waters triggered by Inez.

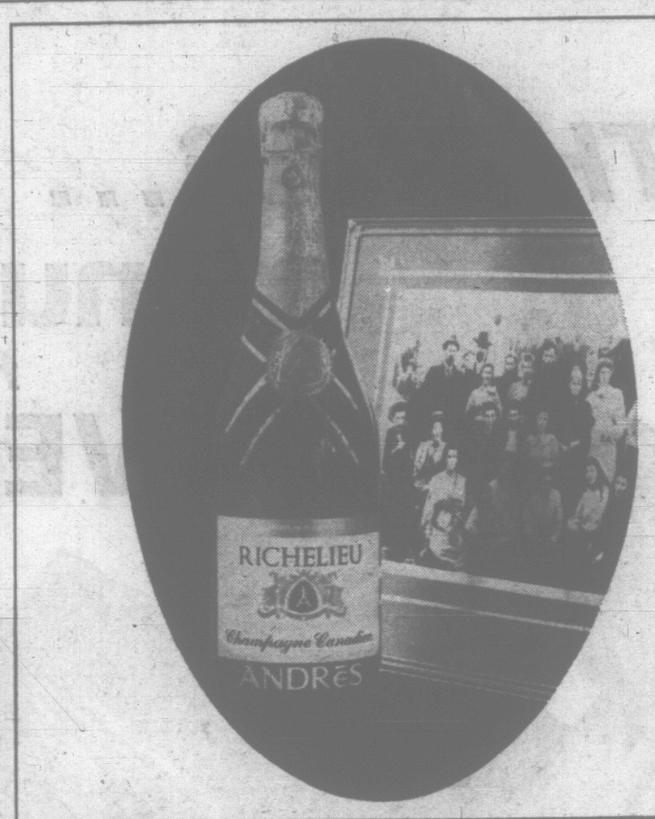

An unconfirmed report said eight persons died after the hurricane moved inland north of Tampico two days ago, but the ministry of national defence said it had no firm reports of deaths.

Some damage estimates exceeded $50,000,000. The cotton crop, almost ready for harvest, was reported wrecked and the loss was believed to total 350,000 bales worth $44,000,000.

Tampico, the country's second largest port was the only large city seriously hurt by the storm. Between 1,500 and 2,000 homes were reported destroyed. The city of 200,000 was still without lights, water or telephone service late Tuesday night.

New Murder Trial

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Court of Appeal has quashed a murder conviction against a native Indian in connection with the death of a woman near Silver Creek Lodge in the Yukon Territory Sept. 5, 1965. In an unanimous decision, the appeal judges ordered a new trial for Frank Isaac, who was charged and convicted of capital murder in the death of Sadie Joe.

A very good year for the Crown Colonies on the Island and the Mainland, which joined together to become the province of British Columbia. Undoubtedly, a good deal of toasting went on. And undoubtedly, a good deal of toasting will mark B.C.'s 100th birthday. To honor the occasion, Andres introduce Richelieu—the aristocracy of wines—specially set aside for Centennial celebrations. Sherries, aperitif and golden cream; rich full bodied Burgundy and crisp Riesling; Champagnes bubbling with excitement.

Plow Contest To Attract Big Field

Entries close next week for the fourth annual Saanich district plowing matches to be held Saturday, Oct. 22, on the farm of Mel Griffith, 10233 MacDonald Park Road, Sidney.

A big entry is expected by Joe Saville, president of the sponsoring Saanich Plowing Association, who said a large contingent of "furrow artists" will be coming from the Fraser Valley and Cowichan districts.

Bill Dyble of Sardis and John Watt of Duncan will be the judges. There are 13 classes including the Saanich Championship (two-furrow tractor drawn plows) in which the first and second place winners will be eligible for the B.C. championship class next year.

Entries are being accepted by the association secretary, Miss G. E. Moses, 11120 West Saanich Road, Sidney.

NO WEEDS

Judging will be on the basis of a 100-point score card with 20 points for the "crown" of the plowed plot, 15 points for straightness of furrows, 15 for covering of weeds (none should show), 20 points for firmness and packing of the plowed soil, 10 points for general appearance and 20 points for the finish.

The matches will start at 10 a.m. and the official opening ceremony will take place at 12:30 p.m. with Reeve J. B. Cumming of North Saanich making the declaration.

OLD EQUIPMENT

The contests will continue through the afternoon and in adition to watching the progress of the plowmen, spectators will be able to view displays of old farm equipment as well as new.

A feature exhibit this year will be a new British Motor Corporation mini tractor which is said to be the smallest diesel farm tractor on the market.

Pierre Berton To Address Uvic Forum

Controversial writer Pierre Berton will speak Oct. 20 at a University of Victoria political science forum.

Berton is remembered as "one of the most gifted students" when he attended Victoria College for two years from 1937 to 1939.

"He was a tall, gangling, redheaded boy with extraordinary ability and an explosive personality," recalls Prof. Sydney Pettit, now history department head, who was one of Berton's instructors.

Berton started the first college newspaper here, which he illustrated himself. Printing was too expensive, so the paper was typed an pinned up on campus notice boards.

Berton's most recent book, The Cool Crazy Committed World of the Sixties, is a collection of interviews with various people.

Berton will speak at 8 p.m. at the Student Union Building.

Also expected to appear at the University next month is Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, who plans a fishing trip west after the national Conservative Party convention in Ottawa Nov. 13 to 16.

Dog Owner Convicted Of Assault

A View Royal man whose dog was killed by a truck Sept. 16 was convicted Wednesday of assault causing bodily harm to the truck driver.

Patrick Byrnes, 217 Helmcken, was remanded to Nov. 5 for pre-sentence report.

Medical evidence was that William Rant, 18, received bruises on the face and back of the head after being hit by Byrnes Sept. 16.

Mr. Rant said the dog ran in front of his truck on Helmcken. He said he couldn't stop in time.

The accused said the driver made no attempt to slow down when he saw the dog.

Byrnes went to the truck after the dog was hit and asked the driver why he didn't slow down.

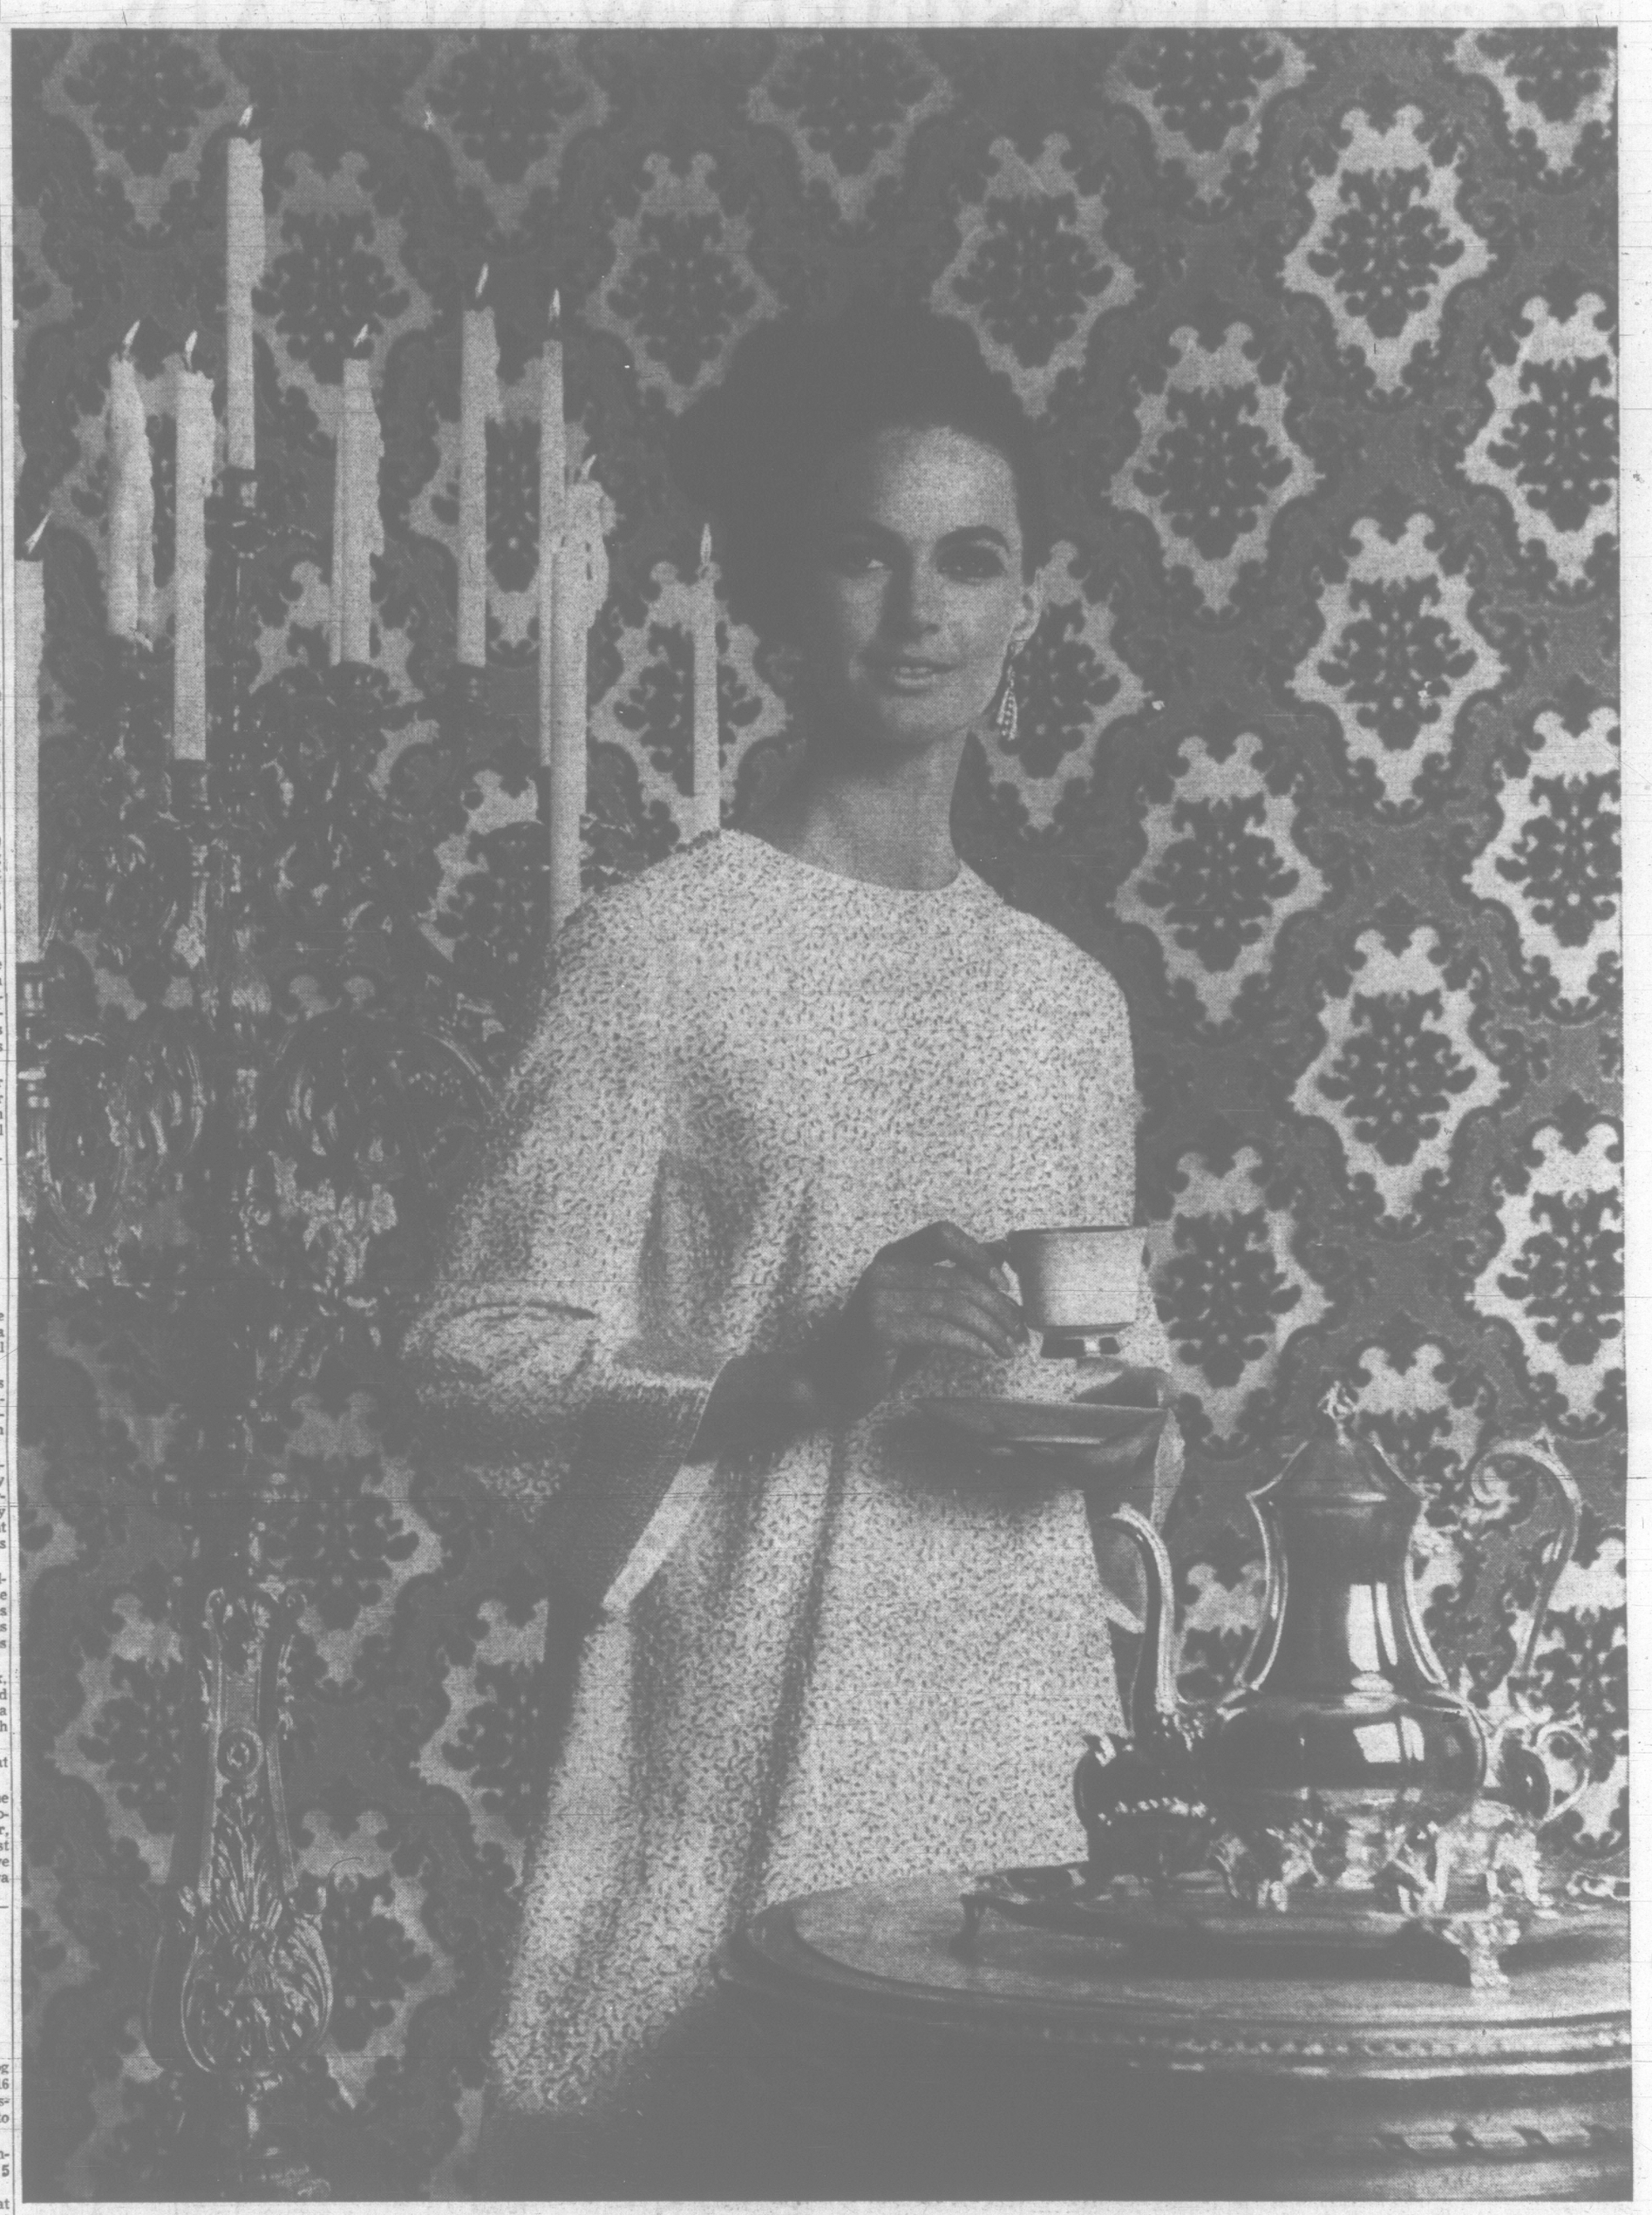

"He just seemed to shrug his shoulders and I hit him," Byrnes said. "I was pretty upset."

Family Wins B.C. Holiday

Thanksgiving was more so for a Victoria family who won an all-expense-paid trip to Harrison Hot Springs for the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Yee, 1540 Fort, pulled the winning ticket in a trip-of-the-year contest sponsored by Saanich Lions Club. Also in on the trip was their three-year-old daughter Colleen.

Top prizes in the contest which benefits Lions charities are two expense-paid trips to Expo 67 next summer. Winning tickets will be drawn April 3.

9 IN MEMORIAM

KLATT—In loving memory of my husband, Alexander, who passed away Oct. 13, 1965.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day.
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife, Mary Klatt.

MOSSEY—In loving memory of Bill, who passed away on Oct. 13, 1962.
Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break but all in vain;
To have, to love, and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things.
But this they wipe out never —
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
Always remembered by your loving wife, June and family.

TURNBULL—In loving memory of my mother, Mrs. Jeanie Turnbull, who passed away Oct. 13, 1965.
In our home she is fondly remembered.
Sweet memories cling to her name;
Those who loved her in life sincerely,
Still love her in death just the same.
—Sadly missed by her daughter and family.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

BITS 'N' PIECES: The defending Stanley Cup champions Montreal Canadiens takes on the young Boston Bruins on Saturday, Oct. 22, starting date for CBC-TV's coverage of the 1966-67 NHL season. There will be 11 color telecasts of Hockey Night in Canada to the end of December. Telecast times are 30 minutes after opening face-off.

Stephen

CBC-TV national news broadened its format this week with a five-minute extension in duration and an increased emphasis on Canadian news. The national news is now 20 minutes on weekdays and 15 minutes on weekends.

Among the newsmen engaged as national affairs reporters stationed across the nation are: Tom Gould and Ken Mason in Ottawa; Sheldon Turcott, Vancouver; Ron Chester, Winnipeg; John Drewery, Toronto; Jean-Pierre Fournier, Montreal, and Paddy Gregg, Halifax.

The Variety telethon on Channels 6 and 8 on the weekend raised $69,000 to carry on work for the handicapped and underprivileged children. Station officials claim the affair from the Queen Elizabeth Theatre and Channel 6 studios was a big success. David Hedison and Ed Ames were guest headliners for the marathon telethon.

CBS-TV has signed the Smothers Brothers to emcee an hour-long variety show designed to replace one of the network's early-season failures, possibly the "Garry Moore Show," now opposite Bonanza, NBC-TV's blockbuster, on Sunday. The brothers did a CBS-TV situation comedy last year which suffered the axe.

The CBC will cerebrate its 30th anniversary on Nov. 2. CBC began with eight radio stations in 1936 and now operates the world's longest and most complex radio and television networks . . . A special one-hour documentary about two Americans currently in the U.S. political spotlight, Senator Robert Kennedy and gubernatorial candidate Ronald Reagan, will be seen Sunday, Oct. 30, on CBC-TV.

If you missed Clu Gulager's appearance on The Virginian there was a reason. He was put on suspension back in June for refusal to take certain parts he felt were not good enough for him . . . A "folk-rock" composition by Ian Tyson of Ian and Sylvia folk singer fame will introduce CBC-TV's new hour-long entry in the public affairs field, "Sunday," starting Nov. 6.

CHANGE FROM K

'Light Touch' To New Broom

By SYDNEY WEILAND

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union has become a quieter place since Nikita Khrushchev was banished from the Kremlin, and many Russians think this is a good thing.

Today, two years after Khrushchev disappeared from the scene, rock-bottom Russian policies remain much the same. It is the manner in which they are carried out that shows a striking and significant change in pace, temperament and style.

Computers, cost accountants and civil servants have taken over, replacing Khrushchev's highly personalized way of running the country.

Khrushchev enjoyed rocking the world with frequent political bombshells which made him a headline name. The new rulers—Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin — prefer quiet diplomacy.

Where Khrushchev liked barnstorming the countryside, telling farmers how to grow corn and so on, his successors bring farm managers to Moscow and show them machines deigned to increase lagging yields.

RAP 'SCHEMING'

The men who took over Oct. 14, 1964, decried Khrushchev, now 72 and a lonely pensioner, for "harebrained scheming," hasty decisions and running a one-man band. What they promised was "scientific" leadership, carried out "without fuss."

The changes enacted during the last two years have been subtle, orderly and always cautious. The new broom has swept into every corner of the nation's life. But it has done so with a light touch, relatively painlessly and with so little drama that many people failed to notice just where it was sweeping.

Where Khrushchev was bluff, outspokenly aggressive, often coarse, always amusing, the new leaders are reserved, serious, dignified—and tough.

On Viet Nam, the only major crisis they have faced, they have been unyielding.

To many Russians, accustomed for long years to the buoyant, rambunctious figure of Khrushchev, the present hierarchy seems distant and enigmatic. No one nowadays seems to know what is going on in the Kremlin.

REDUCE RUMORS

There are fewer rumors, less gossip, almost no jokes about the new leaders. Virtually nothing is known about their private lives.

By contrast with Khrushchev, they seem colorless.

Where Khrushchev enjoyed leaving his desk to plod across a muddy construction site or a collective farm, his successors go forth only rarely. Kremlin lobbies today are full of economic experts and planners.

Where Khrushchev made a fetish of lavish entertainment for foreign dignitaries, buttonholing ambassadors and sticking a pudgy forefinger into their chests for emphasis, visitors now follow much the same humdrum protocol as that decreed by other nations. Diplomats call at the Kremlin by appointment.

Even the supply of caviar at state banquets has been reduced, and the vodka now flows sparingly. Where Khrushchev used any excuse for a party in the Kremlin's glittering St. George's Hall, such receptions now are accorded only to visiting kings and presidents.

40 Top Officers Lost of Services

OTTAWA (CP)—Forty senior officers left the armed forces prematurely in the 18 months before the end of August, Defence Minister Hellyer reported Wednesday.

The cost of their pensions between retirement and what would have been normal retirement age is $811,011, he said in a Commons return for Douglas Harkness, former Conservative defence minister.

The officers involved are commodores and above in the navy, brigadiers and above in the army and air commodores and above in the air force.

Of the 79 senior officers retired between Jan. 1, 1965, and Aug. 30, 1966, only 39 had reached normal retirment age of 55.

Mr. Hellyer declined to reply directly to Michael Forrestall (PC — Halifax) who asked whether servicemen will be allowed to decide freely whether to join the new unified force or to retire voluntarily without loss of pension.

"Terms and conditions of engagement in the unified forces will be set out in the legislation to be introduced in Parliament to establish a single force," Mr. Hellyer said.

He also told Mr. Forrestall that the percentage of the navy budget spent on capital equipment had risen to an estimated 28.5 per cent in the current fiscal year from 15.9 per cent in 1960-61.

Mr. Hellyer said dismissed Rear-Admiral William Landymore advised him in 1965 and 1966 that there were morale problems in Maritime Command.

Esquimalt Asks Navy To Ban Long Parking

Esquimalt council will take steps to halt the use of Grenville Avenue, near CFB Naden, as a long-term parking area by naval personnel.

A two-hour parking limit on the street was suggested at a council meeting Tuesday, but it was pointed out this would inconvenience Grenville Ave. residents.

"Why should Esquimalt residents be subject to limited parking regulations when the Department of National Defence could take care of the problem?" asked Coun. Art. Mebs.

Some of the cars are left parked for "weeks, even months" while their owners do a tour of duty at sea, said Coun. Roy Elphick.

Council decided to consult with the base commander to find a solution.

Marcel Seeks Amateur Card

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Veteran goalie Marcel Pelletier has quit professional hockey and will seek reinstatement as an amateur, Los Angeles Blades announced Wednesday.

In his 16 years, Pelletier, 39, has played for Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers in the National Hockey League and Baltimore in the American League.

Pelletier was the Blades' goalie in the Western League last season.

Wirkowski Back With Argonauts

TORONTO (UPI) — Nobby Wirkowski, fired two years ago as coach, has signed a three-year contract as personnel director of the Toronto Argonauts.

In the newly-created position, Wirkowski will recruit U.S. talent from college and professional ranks. The Argonauts, who have finished at the bottom of the Canadian Football League's eastern conference four consecutive seasons, feel a full time personnel director will solve many of their problems.

Grant Warwick To Coach Wolves

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP)—Grant (Nobby) Warwick, who coached the Penticton Vees to the Allan Cup championship a dozen years ago and later won a world hockey title for Canada, is back coaching hockey again.

Warwick arrived from Vancouver Wednesday and after a conference with team officials, agreed to take over as coach of Sudbury Wolves of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league.

Warwick spent 10 years in the National Hockey League, seven with New York Rangers, two with Boston Bruins and one with Montreal Canadiens.

SURROUNDED by a huge crowd, secret servicemen and New York City policemen, President Johnson made a Columbus Day visit to New York. He is stumping at Flatbush and Church Avenues for Frank O'Connor, Democratic candidate for governor. (AP Wirephoto.)

IN BROOKLYN

Johnson Issues Appeal Against White Backlash

NEW YORK (AP)—President Johnson, drawing large crowds on a campaign tour of New York City, headed for more stumping today after issuing an appeal against white backlash.

Addressing an Italian-American audience in Brooklyn Wednesday night—it was Columbus Day — Johnson reminded his listeners that "it hasn't been too many years since Italian-Americans have felt the raw pain of discrimination right here in America."

In a rather personal appeal—his first of this sort since "backlash" began figuring as an election-year issue—Johnson said:

"For those other Americans who are now feeling that need for fairness to all, regardless of religion, ancestry or race, I ask those of you who have crossed over the river to extend to them a helping hand."

En route back to Washington, where he holds an afternoon news conference, Johnson scheduled a campaign appearance at Wilmington, Del.

Apart from the absence of straightaway party line appeals the talk there was noteworthy for the folksiness of Johnson's bid for tolerance.

In Brooklyn, many thousands turned out to greet Johnson along a winding motorcade route. The official crowd estimate topped 1,000,000. The exact turnout was anyone's guess.

At points along the way, Johnson was greeted by placard-waving critics of the Viet Nam war. In one case he started walking straight toward them, to shake hands—until an aide turned him aside.

Parents Buy Cars Like Toys For Children

VANCOUVER (CP) — Parents are sending their children to their deaths on the highways, says a man who has seen the aftermath of hundreds of fatal traffic accidents in his 24 years as a policeman.

RCMP Sgt. Henry Klick, 57, retired recently to end a career devoted to traffic safety and enforcement. He was in charge of the suburban Burnaby detachment's traffic detail for 10 years.

"I think parents today are buying cars like toys for their children as soon as they reach 16 and have outgrown their other toys," he said.

"They buy them cars to play — but they don't impress on them that the cars are lethal weapons. They just want to get them out of the house and out of their hair. The next thing they know, the children are in jail, the morgue or the hospital."

It is up to parents to see that their children are taught how to drive an automobile and how to control it, he said.

BEST MONEY

"The best money any parent can spend is to send his child to a recognized driving school. A 16 - year - old shouldn't be issued a driver's licence unless he can produce a certificate from such a school."

Many fatal accidents could have been avoided with cars in better mechanical condition. Too many parents allowed the children to buy 10-year-old cars in "as is" condition, he said.

"Dealers shouldn't be allowed to sell these junk heaps off the lot. There should be legislation compelling them to make the cars roadworthy."

'Slush Pile' Cost Borne by Taxpayer

OTTAWA (CP) — Drug-promoting material now flooding Canada's 20,000 doctors has become a "weed growth" beyond the control of the drug houses, the Commons drug prices committee was told today.

Laurence Wilson, partner in a firm of Montreal biological consultants and formerly editor of a medical publication, said cost of the doctor's "slush pile" is handed down to the patient or, in medical-care plans, to the policy holder or even the taxpayer.

To cut down this waste, Mr. Wilson proposed a tax-deduction ceiling for drug promotion of 15 per cent of a company's total drug sales, as was recommended in the report of the Hall royal commission on health services.

The 15 per cent rule would give government backing to the drug houses to get them out of this "rat race" to get doctors to prescribe their drugs.

WOULD REDUCE WASTE

It would cause every company to revise its advertising expenditures for maximum effectiveness and minimum waste.

Those who lived by this business consisted largely of a few promoters established in another country. Independent of both drug houses and doctors, they were "interested only in making a second profit."

The cut back would not cause unemployment in Canada. The number of Canadian residents involved in prescription drug advertising totalled about 20, including stenographers.

Visitor Acquitted

VANCOUVER (CP) — California motorist Spoony Singh, 43, was acquitted Wednesday of a criminal negligence charge laid in connection with a traffic death. Singh, operator of a wax museum in Hollywood, was charged following the death of pedestrian Robert Westwood, 85, of Vancouver, who died in hospital several hours after being struck by a car in an unmarked crosswalk Sept. 2.

Suspect Remanded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eric Eugene, 27, of Vancouver, was remanded to Oct. 18 without plea Wednesday on a charge of attempting to rob a downtown bank Sept. 22. Bail was set at $5,000.

HOME GARDEN

First Leaf Must Feed Corm To Ensure a Healthy Plant

By JACK BEASTALL

Around mid-August we sowed seed of the indoor Cyclamen Cyclamen persicum, formerly Indicum).

We noted at the time that these seedlings make very slow progress in the early stages. This is true of all the seedlings that have to form tubers or corms.

Jack

The first thing we see is a small leaf which seems to make no progress for weeks, but if we lift the seedling we find a tiny corm forming between the roots and the leaf stem.

The first leaf feeds this corm until it is large enough to produce another leaf. When this second leaf has formed, the corm increases in size much more rapidly.

Growing bulbous and cormous plants from seed is the real test of a good gardener, for a good gardener is one endowed with unending patience, and that is the prime requisite in growing cyclamens.

If you have succeeded in maintaining the necessary 50 deg. F. temperature at night and 60 to 65 deg. daytime, you should now have some seedlings with two leaves fully spread.

These may now be transferred to individual pots, or three or four into a four-inch clay pot.

The potting mixture should be good fibrous loam from rotted grass turves. Lacking this, use some well rotted compost rubbed through a half-inch screen so that all the fibre is shredded and part of the mixture.

Add about one-fifth of well rotted (three of four year old) horse manure, and enough sand to make a free draining mix.

Put some crock (shards, broken pieces of pot) in the bottom over the drainage hole, and plant the young corms about the same depth as in the seed box. Keep in good, strong light, shade during long spells of sunshine, and maintain the 50 deg. night temperature.

Red Shield Tops Target

The Salvation Army's Red Shield campaign beat its target by nearly $400 this year, the Salvation Army advisory board was told.

The campaign, headed by Peter Pollen, netted $63,393.41 topping its target of $63,000.

Mr. Pollen has agreed to chair next year's appeal chairman Courtney Haddock told the advisory board.

Massive Manhunt For Killer

CINCINNATI (AP)—The most massive manhunt in Cincinnati's history is under way as authorities seek to end a "reign of terror" created by a rapist-strangler who struck Wednesday for the fourth time in 10 months.

In addition, this city of 500,000 still is shaken from six other unsolved slayings—including the murders three weeks ago of a suburban couple and their small daughter.

City Manager William Wichman ordered unlimited overtime on an emergency basis for the city's 950 policemen. He also pressed firemen into police duty.

The latest victim was Mrs. Alice Hochhausler, 51, wife of a surgeon and mother of nine children. Her body was found Wednesday morning in the Hochhausler garage.

Mrs. Hochhausler was raped and strangled with a cord from her bathrobe.

Like Mrs. Hochhausler, the other three victims of the strangler were in their 50s and were attacked without warning.

In addition to investigating the four stranglings, police are still seeking clues to the murders of Jerry Bricca, 28, his wife, Linda Jane, 24, and their daughter, Debbie, 4.

Deficit Declines

LONDON (AP) — Britain's trade deficit in September declined to £2,000,000 ($6,000,000), the board of trade, a government department, announced today.

Shaping a Country

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — Things are different at the Dominican Republic's National Palace, seat of the three-month-old regime of President Joaquin Balaguer.

For one thing the president's austerity program has eliminated the serving of coffee by white - jacketed palace valets and for another the palace press office is without film for the duration of the program.

More conspicuous, and more significant, is the lack of a feeling of imminent disaster that prevailed during the life of the provisional government that preceded Balaguer's inauguration.

Even during a flurry of wild rumors of a budding coup d'etat a few weeks ago, the palace pace was of busy unconcern. The mood of the 59-year-old reformer who runs the country was that of a corporation executive facing a grave problem, not the loss of his job.

The austerity program is the cornerstone of his national rehabilitation plan. Accepted initially as a short-lived campaign pledge, it has become a painful pay-cheque reality to hundreds of government employees and to businessmen with overstocked shelves and a shrunken market.

There have been only muffled grumblings of discontent so far, probably because the plan's full effects have not been felt.

Even dedicated critics consider the lawyer-historian an incorruptible, morally unassailable man who, ironically, built up his reputation while serving the dictator faithfully and efficiently.

In his methodical way and with support from the military, Balaguer seems on his way to shaping the economic and political strategy for the delicate task ahead.

ASK ANDY

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Sara Asmussen, age 11, of Payette, Idaho, for her question:

How Big Is a Whale's Spout Hole?

A whale is a warm-blooded, air-breathing mammal — but he cannot survive on land. All of his life is spent in the ocean, most of it below the waves. But he must surface to breathe — and for this he has one or two spouts called blowholes on his huge head.

There are about 100 different members of the ocean-going whale clan, but all of them have blowhole spouts for breathing fresh air into their lungs and sending out stale air. A whale can stay below only as long as he can hold his breath. The dolphins and porpoises are small whales. Their lungs and blowholes are smaller than those of their giant cousins. The biggest whale is the largest animal that ever lived in our world.

Everything about a whale is suited for life under water. His eyes ooze oily tears to protect themselves from the salty water. He has no outer ears, and the hearing canal that leads to his brain is no wider than a pencil. His nostrils close up like valves when he goes below — and the nostrils are his blowholes. If he is a big baleen whale, he has two blowholes on top of his head. If he is a toothy sperm whale, he has only one blowhole.

The pilot whale is a small member of the family. This black and white ocean-goer is about 28 feet long, and he has 40 teeth in his rounded jaws. The one blowhole on his bulky head opens 2.5 inches wide. The grampus or killer whale may measure 30 feet, and the blowhole on his bulky head opens up to a width of four inches.

Moby Dick was a toothy sperm whale, maybe 60 feet long. The blowhole in his monstrous head was at least seven inches wide. The biggest whales have rows of pliable baleen instead of teeth, and the biggest of them is the 100-foot blue whale, weighing 150 tons. He empties and refills his giant lungs through two eight-inch blowhiles on top of his head.

Five Minutes

A whale can breathe with his mouth full of water. The blowhole leads directly to his lungs and does not connect with his mouth. The blowhole and air tube mold the shape of his white fountain, and whalers can recognize him from his spout. The sperm whale has an S-shape breathing tube and spouts a foamy fountain up and forward from the left side of his head. The giant blue baleen whale spouts up a double fountain of cloudy vapor. He may puff and blow for five minutes and some of the foamy jets rise 50 feet straight up into the air.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Berkley Rudd, age 13, of Moseley, Va., for his question:

How did the state of Texas get its name?

The early history of our Lone Star State, of curse, belongs to the Indians. Most of the territory was occupied by about 30,000 of them, including a few wild, warlike Apaches and Comanches. The rest were civilized settled groups. Most of them were various Caddo tribes and members of the well organized Hasinai confederacy.

From 1500 to 1845, the history of the territory was a tangled series of disputes between Spain and France, Mexico and America. Early in this restless period, Spanish settlers borrowed a Caddo Indian word meaning friends or allies. The pronounced it Tejas or Tehas. Later, this friendly word from the friendly Indians became Texas.

SCOTLAND'S PAPER WAR

Nationalists Step Up 'Fight for Freedom'

By HUGH DAVIDSON

GLASGOW (CP)—Scots are being rallied with renewed urgency to strike a blow for freedom from Sassenach domination.

The Scottish National party, which has made little headway against the main British parties since it was founded in 1928, has launched a major recruiting campaign to strengthen its demands for political independence from England.

The methods have changed since William Wallace gathered the clans against the English at Stirling Bridge in 1297 and Robert the Bruce established three centuries of independence at the Battle of Bannockburn in 1314.

The modern nationalists hope to pipe in recruits with a series of spot advertisements broadcast by a pirate radio. Warriors need not stir from the glens—just apply by mail to Glasgow for a party card. The weapon will be the ballot instead of the claymore.

The party purchased 50 seven - second promotional spots between Oct. 10 and Nov. 4 on Radio Scotland, a station based on a former lightship in the Firth of Clyde, one of 10 such operations violating state control of broadcasting around British coasts.

Little Time on BBC

Party Secretary Gordon Wilson announced the promotional campaign the day the British government began its promised crackdown on the pirates with court action against one of the English stations. But the nationalists expect to complete their promotion before government action overtakes Radio Scotland.

The party has been driven to the radio pirates, Wilson says, by the fact that the London Sassenachs who allocate time for party political broadcasts on the BBC have limited the nationalists to a "derisory" five minutes a year each on radio and television.

The allocation was based on the 64,000 votes the party polled in the 1964 general election. It has been maintained although the nationalists doubled their vote in the election last March 31, Wilson says.

The current membership drive, in which the party is opening new branches from the River Tweed to John o'Groats, has been encouraged by the electoral breakthrough of fellow Celtic nationalists in a byelection in Wales July 14. The Welsh Nationalists won their first seat in Parliament when Gwynfor Evans, president of Plaid Cymru, unseated Labor in Carmarthen.

Nationalists Unite

Celtic nationalists in Scotland, Wales, Brittany and Ireland make common cause in the Celtic League, which petitioned the United Nations last year on behalf of home-rule yearnings by Scots, Welshmen and Bretons.

Dr. Robert McIntyre, president of the Scottish nationalists and a vice-president of the Celtic League, is the only member of his party ever elected to Parliament—and he stayed only briefly. He won a 1945 byelection in Motherwell, Lanarkshire, but lost the general election three months later.

Last March, the party contested 22 of Scotland's 71 constituencies and no nationalist came close to winning. Best showing was in West Lothian, where W. C. Wolfe placed second to Labor—ahead of a Conservative and a Communist—with 17,955 votes to the winner's 26,662. Dr. McIntyre was second strongest nationalist with 9,381 votes out of a total of 36,000 in Stirling West.

Small Dent

The total nationalist poll of 128,474 votes out of more than 3,000,000 in Scotland makes a small dent in major-party power. But the party looks at its efforts more positively, emphasizing that the total is twice the 1964 figure and represents 15 per cent of the votes cast in the 22 constituencies contested.

Further, the party claims a card-carrying membership of more than 26,000—bigger than the Liberal party, which holds five Scottish seats.

"Our target is 50,000 by next year," says Glasgow party agent Alasdair Macdonald. "We will exceed the Labor party's paid-up membership of 30,000." Labor, which has additional support through trade union affiliation, holds 43 Scottish seats to 23 for the Conservatives.

SMUGGLERS TURN TO BIRDS

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—What, Australian customs officers are asking, will these smugglers think of next?

Already this year there has been an alarming increase in the amount of drugs smuggled into Australia and hardly a ship arrives from an East Asian port without some crew member being found trying to sneak ashore with his illegal packet.

Now the smugglers have struck at one of Australia's precious natural assets—birds. Some species of Australian parrots are threatened with extinction because of the number being smuggled out of the country.

Australian parrots, among the world's most beautiful and colorful birds, bring high prices overseas among collectors and at private zoos. Smugglers are believed to be getting up to $1,600 for a white sulphur-crested cockatoo, one of the rarest and most sought-after Australian birds.

During the last two months, Sydney customs officers have seized three shipments of Australian parrots being smuggled to The Netherlands and France.

An official of the fauna panel of New South Wales said the export of native birds is banned because if a market was created overseas the demand would increase so much there would be no birds left in Australia.

Overseas aviaries are breeding Australian birds and the high prices are being offered for fresh blood lines to improve their stock.

The only legal trade in Australian parrots is from zoo to zoo. The maximum penalty for illegally exporting native Australian birds is $1,000.

$50,000 Independent Survey Of Hospital Needs Proposed

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A proposal to alleviate an acute shortage of hospital beds in the capital region will be discussed by municipal leaders within the next few days.

At the same time they will consider a suggestion to engage an expert to conduct a long range survey of hospital needs for the region. Estimated costs is $50,000.

This was the outcome of a meeting called Wednesday by the Victoria and District Hospitals Planning Council to impress upon civic leaders the urgent need for hospital expansion program.

Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox told hospital officials he has a proposal for a short range hospital construction program which he planned to discuss with the mayor and reeves of Greater Victoria within the next few days.

He would not disclose the scheme until the matter was discussed by municipal leaders.

"It's an interim financing plan for hospital construction," he said. "I have already discussed it informally with the reeves, but the matter has gone no further."

He said he was proposing an interim construction program in order to give UBCM time to discuss with the B.C. government the urgent need to improve its provincial-municipal cost sharing basis.

"We have to settle this matter," said the reeve.

Oak Bay, along with other municipalities, is opposed to the government's cost-sharing formula for hospital construction.

At present municipal taxpayers are expected to pick up 30-40 per cent of the cost.

VOTERS SAID NO

The cost-sharing formula was the main reason why ratepayers in a referendum last year turned down a $15 million construction program to be financed through a two-mill levy on taxes.

They wanted the government to take on a greater share of the costs.

But the defeat of the program left the capital region with a serious hospital problem — a problem growing year by year.

The shortage of beds has become acute. Some people have to wait months for admission to hospital. Operations now are being booked for February.

Ald. Hugh Stephens made the proposal for a long range survey of hospital needs.

"We should know our needs not only for the present but the future," he said.

COST ESTIMATE

John Holdstock estimated cost for a survey would be about $50,000.

"Considering the millions we are going to spend on hospitals in the future it's not expensive, said Reeve Hugh Curtis. "We spent $70,000 on a sewer survey."

The meeting was attended by representatives from all South Vancouver organized and unorganized areas.

Chairman Joseph Casey said the hospitals' planning board felt no time should be lost in constructing hospitals.

But he stressed it was up to the municipalities to raise the funds.

"It is not up to us to finance hospitals," he said. "We haven't got the money. The only thing we can do is to tell you our needs."

GETTING WORSE

Some doctors said it was getting almost impossible to cope with the demands for beds.

"It's going to get worse and worse," added one physician. "Where is it going to end?"

What concerned the board most was the time it would take to construct a hospital.

Mr. Holdstock explained that if the financing was approved this year, it would take at least five years before the building was up.

"The planning and construction of a hospital takes a long time," he warned. "There are many steps involved — architects, plans, tenders."

Members of the council also doubted that the government would agree to change its cost-sharing formula.

"We tried everything," said Mr. Casey, "but go nowhere."

Crew Protests 'Unsafe' Ship

VANCOUVER (CP)—The crew of the British freighter Hermiston picketed the vessel Wednesday protesting unsafe conditions and demanding an inquest into the death of a sailor Sunday.

David Coman, a deckhand, said the picketing was halted after the ship's captain agreed to press for an inquest in Vancouver into the death of John Bryant Rees, 23. RCMP said Rees fell 40 feet from deck level into a hold while the ship was making for port.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Thirty-three prisoners sang their way out of jail.

Colson dismissed the charges because it was his 47th birthday.

The new 1967 Volkswagen

The first sight of the new VW will leave you wondering what's new about it.

It has 23 new features, most of which you might not notice. Here are some of them:

Brighter headlights. And you won't notice the extra brightness until it's a moonless night.

Then there's a wider engine opening. You'll never notice it. Only your VW mechanic will notice because it lets him service your engine quicker.

And the new VW has retracting seat belts. You'll notice this new feature when you don't lose your temper trying to find them.

The new VW has dual brakes. If the front wheel brakes fail, the rear wheel brakes will stop you, and vice-versa. But then, VW brakes hardly ever fail, so you'll never notice this new feature.

Oh yes. The new VW has back-up lights which you'll only notice when you're backing up, naturally.

And in case you've ever noticed that it doesn't rain or snow at one speed, you'll notice the new VW has two-speed windshield wipers.

The new VW engine is faster than it's ever been before. You'll only notice that when you pass cars you'd never think of passing before.

And there are some sensational status quo features on the new VW you'll be happy to hear about. The engine is still air-cooled so it will never boil over or freeze up. It is still in the back pressing down on the drive wheels for better traction in mud, snow, and sand.

Your new VW will still average 34 miles to a gallon. So if you won't get the new 1967 Volkswagen Deluxe for what's new, get it for what's old.

'REPUTATION OF CANADA AT STAKE IN EXPO '67'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pierre Dupuy, commissioner of Expo '67, said Wednesday the world's fair has to be successful—Canada's international reputation is at stake.

Mr. Dupuy, here to address the Canadian Tourist Association's annual convention, said in an interview those behind Expo have done their best to assure success.

"A successful exhibition of such magnitude will be a fitting symbol of Canada's accession to the company of great nations," he said. "The reputation of Canada is at stake."

The commissioner predicted Expo won't cost the Canadian taxpayer a cent, even though the federal government will pick up the tab for half the net cost.

DUPUY . . . done our best

Mr. Dupuy's arithmetic adds up federal tax revenues accruing since work started on Expo three years ago to $225,000,000. He added another $250,000,000 in foreign investment, an estimated $220,000,000 in increased foreign trade and a $400,000,000 boom in tourism to the credit side of the ledger.

He said funds spent on the fair will be returned with dividends reflected in all segments of the Canadian economy.

U.S. Hopes Rejection From Reds Not Final

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk says the United States hopes for "a more considered reply" despite the Communists' public rejection of latest American proposals for peace in Viet Nam.

Washington does not acept the turndown as final, Rusk said Wednesday night in a speech to the Association of the United States Army.

If the Communists are uncertain about the meaning of the new set of proposals for scaling down or ending the war, he added, "the way to clear it up is through discussion."

Ambassador Arthur Goldberg outlined the U.S. proposals to the UN General Assembly last month. He offered a halt in the bombing of North Viet Nam if Hanoi would cut down its military operations in South Viet Nam, and called for a timetable for withdrawal of foreign forces from South Viet Nam.

North Viet Nam, China, Russia and the Viet Cong all have denounced Goldberg's speech, but Rusk said "we do not regard as final public and negative reactions from the other side to our latest proposals."

RUSK
. . . seeks Soviet help

Rusk also said the Johnson administration "would like to see some help from Moscow on Southeast Asia." He did not elaborate on this comment, made to reporters after he appeared before a congressional committee.

NOT JUST TOURISTS

Rusk was asked whether there were indications the North Vietnamese were preparing for a major offensive. "We know there has been a buildup of North Vietnamese in and just outside the demilitarized zone (separating North and South Viet Nam)," he replied, "and they are not there just as tourists."

Rusk plans to arrive in Manila three days before the opening of the Oct. 24-25 summit meeting there, then accompany President Johnson on the rest of his Asian tour.

As Rusk discussed the war's diplomatic side effects, another cabinet member was reviewing its impact on the U.S. economy.

Commerce Secretary John Connor said the president stands ready to request wage and price controls if needed to support the military effort in Viet Nam, but added:

"There is no indication now that he will not be able to give our fighting men everything they need to prosecute our cause in Viet Nam and throughout the world just the way we are doing it now—without controls."

Connor addressed a meeting of the American Ordnance Association, as did Arthur M. Okum, a member of the president's council of economic advisers.

Okum, too, rejected any immediate wage and price controls.

Any Excuse Sends Students on Rampage

NEW DELHI (AP) — India's students are on the rampage from one end of the country to the other, threatening law and order, and posing the current No. 1 problem for Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Riots, marches and strikes have occurred on and off the campuses in nearly all 16 states in recent weeks.

The prime minister has made it clear the violence must be stopped, but also said police must show restraint and the nation's leaders must look for ways to eliminate problems behind the unrest.

Mrs. Gandhi called for a forum for students to bring up grievances and thresh them out in "an atmosphere of understanding which is free from violence or disorder."

She noted that one problem was India's great population growth, which has outstripped school facilities. She also said that more developed countries have extracurricular activities available for students, whereas in India there are almost none.

FREE BUT SCARCE

Education is free and compulsory but India lacks enough classes or teachers for the mushrooming student population.

Foreign exchange troubles have resulted in shortages of textbooks and laboratory equipment. For those fortunate enough to earn degrees, the job openings are few and the pay is low.

Much of the student violence results from frivolity that gets out of hand. Student strikes have called because one group felt an examination professor was too strict or because a medical examination was made compulsory for first-year students.

The danger is that the students are learning the power of their mass protests and one university vice - chancellor has described the student demonstrations as India's version of China's teen - age militant Red Guards.

Bunk House Bare Again

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bunk House Restaurant featured bare-bosomed waitresses again Wednesday, after a one-week cover-up.

Owner Les Stork said he is following the advice of his lawyer, who told City Council Tuesday it has no right to say what the waitresses can or cannot wear.

Licensing inspecor Milt Harrel delivered a cover-up ultimatum from city hall a week ago.

'FINAL OFFER' SENT BY U.K. TO SMITH

LONDON (AP)—The British government today approved a "final offer" to Premier Ian Smith, giving him six weeks to end the Rhodesian rebellion or face harsh compulsory sanctions under the United Nations.

Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden told reporters after a British cabinet meeting that Sir Morrice James, a high official of the Comomnwealth relations office, will fly to Salisbury tonight with the government's minimum terms for a settlement.

Rail Union Shrugs Off Sell Threats

Striking Pacific Great Eastern Railway workers today shrugged off "threats" the line would be sold as old hat and countered they wanted a face-to-face meeting with the threateners for some serious negotiating.

Fred Richmond, chairman of the five-union federation of PGE employees which pulled its 400 non-operating tradesmen off the line 18 days ago, said the union never has asked more than the 50-cents-hourly wage increase spread over two years as recommended by a conciliation board and offered by management.

He said the union struck to obtain government acceptance of the new principle proposed by conciliation chairman Les Bewley, a Vancouver magistrate, that PGE tradesmen not be tied to their counterparts in the national railways but be compared with other B.C tradesmen.

FRINGE BENEFITS

"Our committee met this morning and decided to ask for face-to-face meetings at the top level — Bennett, Gunderson and Williston — for serious and earnest negotiations on the fringe benefits proposed in the Bewley report," Mr. Richmond said.

"This top management has never negotiated with us. We've just had Joe Broadbent (PGE general-manager) on the other side of the table and it's obvious he has no power to make decisions."

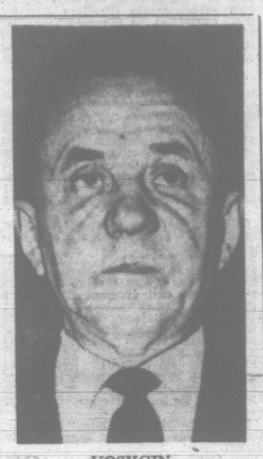

The union planned to transmit its proposal later today but at press time there was an unconfirmed report that Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, in Vancouver, had met a union spokesman and had given an undertaking to set up a meeting between the top union and management representatives.

Mr. Richmond said suggestions by Premier Bennett, PGE president, and directors Einar Gunderson and Forests Minister Williston Wednesday that the PGE might have to be sold by the province if the strike continues were just manoeuvres by the management.

"These threats were made before at the bargaining table. We didn't take them seriously then and we don't take them seriously now. Who would buy a rail line that was tied up by a strike?"

He said a suggestion by Mr. Williston that the federation was acting as a secret tool of the

KOSYGIN

RUSSIA SAYS:

Chinese Prevent Red Win

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin charged today that China has prevented world communism from putting "a quick end" to United States military actions in Viet Nam.

Speaking to a Soviet - Polish friendship meeting in Sverdlovsk in the Urals, Kosygin said:

"Had American imperialism encountered the joint rebuff of all countries of socialism . . . it is doubtless that a quick end would have been put to its outrages in Viet Nam.

"China's position has become a serious obstacle in the struggle for this sacred cause."

Kosygin disputed claims by Peking that the Russians were helping U.S. policy in Viet Nam and giving Hanoi only half-hearted support.

BOASTS OF STRENGTH

Boasting of Soviet economic strength, Kosygin said the nation had "a big harvest" this year "and the output of animal husbandry has sharply increased."

Western sources said economic strength was a major factor in Soviet ability to provide large amounts of military and economic aid to countries such as North Viet Nam in moves to win over their allegiance in the feud with Peking.

Soviet-Chinese relations have steadily worsened in the last two months.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda today called the cultural revolution "a political purge."

SEE EXPULSION MOVE

In Washington Kosygin's slashing attack on China was viewed as evidence that the Soviet leadership would like to read the Chinese Communists entirely out of the Soviet-led world Communist movement.

Washington experts considered it significant that Kosygin made his sensational charges on the occasion of a top-level Polish visit to the Soviet Union. Poland's support would be important. Generally—Eastern European Communist countries have opposed expulsion of the Chinese from the Soviet - led world Communist movement for two reasons: First, the precedent of extreme denunciation might be used against any one of them at some future time; second, the European Communist countries have used the Sino-Soviet split to gain for themselves more room to manoeuvre.

Airport Loot All In Cash

MONTREAL (CP) — A province-wide manhunt was under way as police of four forces sought thieves who stole $1,000,000 in cash from the mailroom at Montreal International Airport early today.

Montreal district postmaster Hector Cormier said departmental investigators are investigating the possibility of an "inside job".

Police squads raced to a north-end Montreal building nine miles due east of the airport on a tip that some of the mailbags had been found. They said later they had found only one cloth mailbag which did not seem to be connected with the robbery.

The police, from the RCMP, Montreal city and suburban Dorval forces, found the bag at the rear of a house on St. Lawrence Boulevard. Provincial police sent out a province-wide alert but said no description of the daring robbers was immediately available.

A Post Office official said the mailroom at the airport is "difficult to get at" and normally guarded.

"Whoever did the job certainly must have known his way around," said a post office security official, who added there are "some good leads."

The robbery occurred in the airport's mailroom when thieves slashed their way through a heavy wire mesh to steal 15 bags believed to contain bills in various denominations.

RCMP and post office investigators and Dorval police set up roadblocks and were searching all cars leaving the airport.

Post office officials said the amount of the loss probably was "considerable" but an exact accounting could not be made until reports of shipments were obtained from the banks who had sent money through the airport Wednesday night and today.

A Provincial Police spokesman said it was estimated that about $1,000,000 in cash had been taken.

The stolen mailbags were made of heavy leather and each measured 10 by 12 inches. In addition to the 15 small bags weighing 10 pounds each, police said two 30-pound bags probably containing regular mail were taken.

EMPLOYEES ON LUNCH

The theft was believed to have occurred between 4 a.m. and 4:43 a.m. while mailroom employees were on a meal break.

Post office investigators said the mailroom was "difficult to get at and normally was guarded."

It was not immediately known if guards were posted at the time of the robbery.

It was believed that the bags were delivered to the airport Thursday night in an armored car and were destined to be sent to bank branches in various parts of the province today.

Dorval police said money from at least several chartered banks was taken. They did not name the banks.

Russians Coming?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson said today he had invited leaders of the Soviet Union to come to the United States. He said he told Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko this week that the Russian "leadership" would be welcome to visit this country.

Tory Ready to Stake Seat On Charge Against Hellyer

NUGENT

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservatives Wednesday called for the resignation of Defence Minister Hellyer charging that he tampered with a report by Rear-Admiral William Landymore.

The charge was made by Terrence Nugent (PC—Edmonton, Strathcona) who said he was prepared to stake his seat on its accuracy.

He said in the House of Commons that the minister tampered with testimony prepared for the defence committee by Landymore, who was later dismissed from service.

Mr. Hellyer described the accusations as a "slanderous insinuation."

Outside the Commons, he told reporters he thought the move was "just an attempt on the part of some desperate people to try to smear my reputation."

He repeated that some changes had been made in Admiral Landymore's testimony but said there was no evidence at the time that the admiral was anything but pleased with the result.

Asked if he thought Admiral Landymore was aligning himself with the Conservatives, Mr. Hellyer replied:

"Yes, there's a very close relationship between the admiral and others and the Conservative party in a desperate attempt to destroy me. . . ."

MOTION DISALLOWED

Inside the Commons, Mr. Nugent's motion to charge the minister with breach of privileges was disallowed by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, but the opposition continued to press the attack.

After more than two hours of charges and procedural wrangling, the hassle was still not over. Continued debate today seemed likely after the Speaker suggested that Mr. Nugent meet him to discuss a rephrased motion.

Mr. Nugent said he had obtained a sworn affidavit from Admiral Landymore saying his testimony was altered during the time it was in Mr. Hellyer's office before the committee sitting.

The debate brought out some cutting language directed at Mr. Hellyer.

"Lied to the House," Lloyd R. Crouse (PC — Queens - Lunenburg) interjected at one point.

"Another Profumo," added Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) in a reference to the British war minister who resigned after admitting that he had lied to the House about his relationship with playgirl Christine Keeler.

Mr. Nugent's first motion was ruled out by the Speaker on the grounds that his case did not meet House rules about raising his point at the earlier opportunity.

The question of Admiral Landymore's testimony before the Commons defence committee last June had been raised before, the Speaker said.

Mr. Nugent said he had obtained a sworn statement from Admiral Landymore only during the weekend. He had presented his point of privilege Wednesday after a careful investigation and with due regard to the seriousness of the matter.

Mr. Nugent said he had an affidavit from Admiral Landymore that the admiral had gone to Mr. Hellyer's office before his committee appearance. He gave his brief orally and was asked to leave a copy with the defence minister.

The brief later was returned to the admiral with four pages deleted and two others substituted, Mr. Nugent said.

DIDN'T CONSENT

Admiral Landymore hadn't consented to the changes in his brief, which dealt with the personnel situation in the Maritime Command, Mr. Nugent said.

When Admiral Landymore was fired last July, Mr. Hellyer said the text of the admiral's presentation to the defence committee had been altered. This was because he had tried to bring before the committee matters outside his authority—personnel figures in the Maritime Command he headed.

This became a key issue in the debate when Mr. Hellyer demanded that Mr. Nugent in-

ALL TESTIMONY 'NOW IN DOUBT'

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative Terry Nugent said in the Commons today the testimony of every witness to the summer sessions of the defence committee must be in "very serious doubt."

The MP for Edmonton-Strathcona said all these witnesses, including Rear-Admiral William Landymore, should be called before the Commons privileges committee to testify on his charge that Defence Minister Hellyer "tampered" with the evidence of the admiral.

The privileges committee should look into the practices and procedures governing testimony by witnesses so that government officials would understand the limitations of ministerial authority.

At the House opening today, Mr. Nugent said Mr. Hellyer's accusation that his charge is spurious impugns his honor and integrity.

EBAN
. . . blames Syria

Mid-East Feud Taken To UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The threat of a new Middle East crisis confronted the United Nations today as Israel charged Syria with murders, sabotage and open incitement to war.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban called for an emergency meeting of the Security Council. The 15-nation council was expected to meet Friday.

Israel went to the council after a long series of incidents along the Syrian-Israeli border which the Israelis blame on a sabotage organization based in Syria. Saturday a land mine explosion killed four Israeli policemen and injured two.

The Syrian government has disclaimed responsibility for the raids, which are the work of a group of Palestine Arab refugees, known as el - Assefa (storm) or el-Fatah (conquest). In retaliation, Israeli planes attacked a Syrian engineering project north of the Sea of Galilee in July.

NORTH AMERICA ONLY BUFFER REMAINING

W.H.O. Warns of World Hunger Crisis

ROME (CP)—The world food situation is more precarious now than at any time since the Second World War, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization said in its annual report published today.

The FAO said that in 1965-66 the world population increased by about 70,000,000 people but there was an average of two per cent less food for everyone.

This raised fears that the gap between population and food production would increase and that mankind is moving deeper into its worst hunger crisis.

"Any remaining complacency about the food and agriculture situation must surely have been dispelled by the events of the past years," said Director-General B. R. Sen of India.

"But for good harvests in North America, world production would almost certainly have declined. In fact, in each of the developing regions except the Near East, food production is estimated to have fallen by two per cent in total and four to five per cent on a per-capita basis.

"The poor harvests ot 1965-66 are all the more serious since they come, not in the midst of plenty, but after a long period in which production has only barely kept up with the rapidly mounting population.

"When millions of people are already inadequately nourished there is little if any margin against the effects of a bad season."

Until recently, large stocks of grain accumulated since the early 1950s, mainly in North America, provided a cushion against emergencies.

Big shipments of these stocks helped avert disaster in India and other drought - stricken areas during the last year.

But these stocks have dropped to their lowest level in more than a decade, due to shipments to famine areas, big imports by China and Russia and successful efforts by the United States to limit production.

"Thus," Dr. Sen said, "the world food situation is now more precarious than at any time since the period of acute shortage immediately after the Second World War. Because of the depletion of stocks the world has become much more dependent on current production, and hence on weather conditions.

"It is therefore with some anxiety that we wait the outcome of the 1966-67 harvests."

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, OCT. 13, 1966—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

Last year we bought a travel trailer in haste, latched it to the tail of our well - seasoned car, and scurried north into such misadventures as I wince even now to remember. This fall, though, it was a different story. The car that had failed us was thoroughly reconditioned and beefed up with overload springs. Our cargo was properly stowed at the hitch end of the trailer, where it belonged.

These precautions made the difference between a nightmare trip and a pleasant holiday, during which we got a chance to test the advantages and drawbacks of trailer vacationing as we handn't been able to before.

I'm not going to pose as an expert here. We are, in fact, still learning from experienced trailer people — a friendly fraternity always ready to help out beginners. However, in case any of you contemplate a next-year switch from tent canvas to aluminum roof, a few notes might come in handy.

Our rig is listed as a 13-footer. This is small as trailers go, expecially since three of those feet consist of tongue. A 10-foot living space approximately six wide demands certain qualities and concessions of those who pro pose to occupy it for even a night.

They must get along very well indeed with each other, and they have to be neat.

★

Trailer designers, a bunch clever as shipwrights, manage to pack an amazing lot of useful features into their rolling homes. In our three-yards-plus, we have more cupboard space than we need, under-seat lockers, fold-back upper bunk with mattress for two extra sleepers, three-burner propane stove with capacious ice box underneath, detachable table, and surprisingly roomy clothes closet.

Add to these features one propane lamp and three electrics, sink with running water from marine-type pump or tap, depending on location, also screened and curtained windows, and we ex-campers find ourselves in what seems an almost sinful state of vacation luxury.

Had we wished, we could have substituted a gas refrigerator for the ice box. Some trailerites swear by these, others at them. We haven't got an oven; if a time should come when we want to spare fishing hours for roasting or baking, we'll acquire one of the clever folding ovens that sit atop a stove burner.

These are our basics, and so far we've got along very comfortably with them.

But if you have children still of an age to go holidaying with their parents, better think of a 16 or 18-footer.

These sizes offer more space. In them, your trailer may boast a shower, and the chances are that it will have, in a tiny room of its own, a facility which is good for an argument among trailer folk any day.

★

This is a toilet. The pros point out that it's darn convenient, especially in the middle of a rainy night.

The antis insist that trailer camps, without exception, have washrooms; that in wild country all one needs is a spade and the inclination, and that trailer toilets are anything but a nuisance.

There are also the in-betweens, who compromise with ducky little commodes.

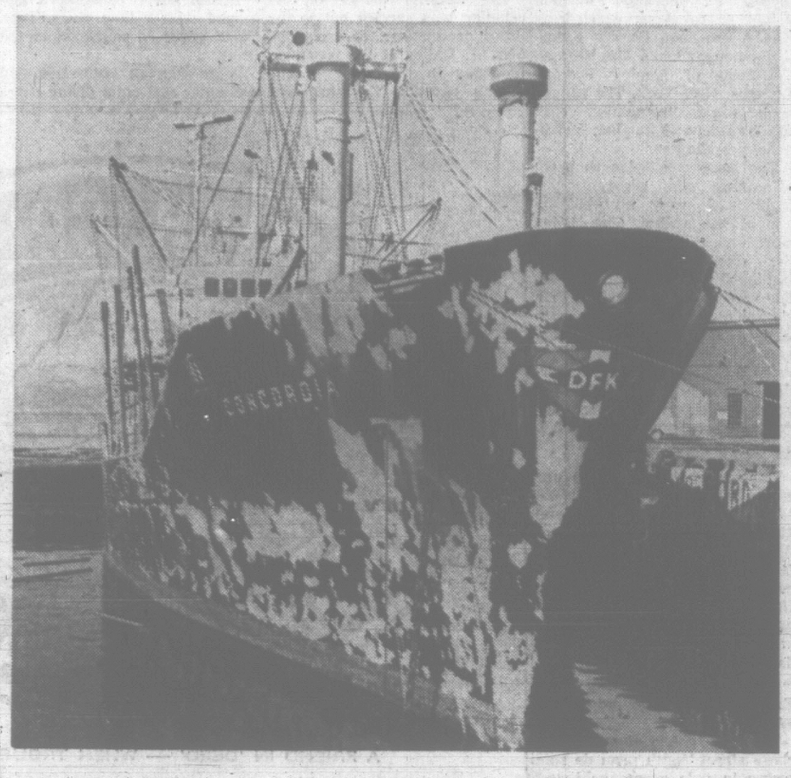

Here, I'm still too much of a greenhorn to deliver a verdict, and will only point out that one couple we met, west from Ottawa for a wander-year, have yet to initiate their trailer toilet. They use the space for storage.

Soiled clothes? Run them in to the nearest coin saundry, where you can also spin rain-soaked garments dry.

Want more warmth? Carry a clay flower pot, invert it over a burner, and you've got an effective makeshift furnace. Or you can instal a propane heater.

Propane, you'll learn, is clean and safe, and a standard bottle (that's the steel container mounted on the tongue) will last through the average two-week vacation.

For further dope, consult any of those friendly experts I mentioned . . . one or two of whom, I hope will write in.

Double Berth But Not Twins At 'Point'

Captain W. Tsoong sailed his grain ship, Concordia, into Ogden Point today — and found he'd been beaten to the gun by a wood (lumber) ship.

There, moored in the next berth, was the Concordia.

He could well be excused for thinking he'd got a case of seeing double. But he hadn't.

For the first time in Ogden Point's history, two ships with the same name had tied up on the same day.

Capt. Tsoong's ship (right) is here to load grain for Japan. Of Monrovian registry, the 8,107 gross ton vessel, was built in 1945.

The other Concordia (above) skippered by Capt. P. Haagensen, is loading lumber for Holland. Of Danish registry, she is 3,449 gross ton and was built in 1964.

A shipping agent estimated the odds of two ships with the same name tying up in the same port at the same time at a million to one against.

Lloyd's register shows six Concordias in the world.

THIS WAS FROSTY THURSDAY

Well, nobody waved goodbye, but summer's good and gone.

Cars wore white frosting this morning and summer flowers caught a nasty chill as the thermometer nudged the freezing point.

The low overnight was 33 bitter degrees, the coldest so far this fall season.

Friday will be warmer, but —you guessed it—only after a night of rain and cloud.

RECALLING ISLAND-MAINLAND UNION

Nov. 20 Proclaimed Day of Thanks

The provincial cabinet today proclaimed Sunday, November 20 "as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God" to commemorate the union of Vancouver Island and Mainland British Columbia 100 years ago.

The actual union took place on a November 19, but the feature event of this Centennial year was scheduled for the nearest Sunday so that all churches could hold a common thanksgiving.

The cabinet urged that its proclamation be read to all congregations November 20 by all clergymen throughout the province because:

"It is considered to be and is deemed right and proper that the citizens of British Columbia should be afforded the opportunity humbly to render thanks to Almighty God for the generous gifts of nature and for the blessings of peace and prosperity with which their province has been so richly endowed and to combine in simultaneous prayer for the continuation of such blessings."

Union Merger Seeks Stability For Shipyards

One Union Per Yard Aim of Negotiations

By AB KENT

Management efforts to have the major unions decertified for bargaining purposes appear to be in conflict with union efforts to be recertified under a joint authority.

Spokesmen for both sides agree that current applications by management and the Joint Shipyard Conference of unions before the Labor Relations Board would have the same effect.

The shipyards want the largest of some 17 shipyard trade unions decertified in favor of a single union at each yard—Yarrows, Victoria Machinery Depot and Burrard Drydock.

An application is before the LRB to this end, but the unusual move is considered by observers to have little chance of approval.

The other application, deadline for submission being Friday, seeks to have joint certification for bargaining purposes on behalf of all the shipbuilding trades.

SINGLE CONTRACT

Unions so named on a certificate would then delegate bargaining to the Joint Shipyard Conference.

All but two unions — pipefitters and electricians — have agreed to this proposal.

It is thought that management also would endorse such an arrangement to bring bargaining under more firm control.

Dick Mahoney, bargaining spokesman for the shipyards, explained:

"What we are trying to do is achieve joint bargaining policy so we don't have to face splinter groups."

HOLDOUTS

He referred to recent union holdouts that have kept shipyards closed in strike action even though a majority of other unions have accepted settlement terms.

"This is the only way it could be done from a company point of view," Mr. Mahoney said in defence of the companies' application.

He said he felt the Joint Conference submission would accomplish the same end, however.

"As long as there is the possibility of splinter strikes, they are going to destroy the shipyards in British Columbia," he said.

Andy Manson, a spokesman for the Joint Conference, said he thought the LRB hearing on its application would come by the end of this month.

But meanwhile, he said, 3½-months-old negotiations with the companies continue on the traditional basis, with the Joint Conference acting for the unions, with unions abiding by recommendations only voluntarily.

First meeting with government conciliation officer Jack Sherlock was held in Vancouver Wednesday and a further meeting in Victoria is set for Monday.

HARBOR PROJECT

Mayor Plans Bid for Aid From Ottawa

Mayor A. W. Toone said today he would make an appeal for joint Inner Harbor development when he visits Ottawa at the end of October.

He referred to improvements along the Causeway necessitated by pressure of traffic and more active use of the harbor by aircraft.

Plans for Causeway improvement to allow for expanded traffic flow and pedestrian access have been in the talking stage for several years.

The city needs senior government aid in order to initiate the project.

The mayor said he hoped to talk to federal Labor Minister John Nicholson when he visits Victoria Tuesday to address a joint Chamber of Commerce-Kiwanis Club meeting.

TO OPEN HELIPORT

Immediately following the meeting at Empress Hotel the mayor and club members will go by car and bus to Industrial Reserve overlooking the harbor for the opening by Mayor Toone of the city's new heliport.

The mayor is expected to stress the importance of transportation and harbor development in the near future when he declares the landing pad officially open.

Captial Region Planning Board director Tony Roberts will give a presentation on the site relating to the proposed Victoria West freeway system that will be linked with a bridge to James Bay.

A Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. craft will use the pad and provide chamber members with courtesy flights.

Cabinet Backs Dump Permit At Buttle Lake

Cabinet ministers appear satisfied with the Pollution Control Board's decision giving Western Mines Ltd. a permit to dump mine tailings into Buttle Lake without a public hearing first.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan this morning said he had no jurisdiction over the board so he would not comment on its action except to say he would be willing to drink the lake water on trust.

He pointed out the board's permit requires the mine to pipe its tailings into the lake at the 120-foot depth.

"I'll stand there and drink water off the surface any day of the week," he said.

MANY SAFEGUARDS

Earlier, Ray Williston, who is responsible for the pollution control board as water resources minister, said the board had detailed many requirements in the permit to ensure it was safe.

Consequently, he said, he did not see much point in the cabinet reviewing the board's decision because the ministers did not have expert knowledge.

He said neither laymen "who are steaming this up with emotion" nor cabinet ministers are in a position to tell the board's experts "that they don't know their own business."

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi expressed a similar view this week.

Murder Question Remains As Police, Jury Reports Conflict

Saanich police and a coroner's jury have issued contradictory reports in the death last month of Mrs. Nancy M. Beggs.

The jury Wednesday gave a verdict of murder.

But Chief W. A. Pearson today said, "We're inclined to think it's an accidental death."

He indicated that all information pertinent to the case had not been made available to the jury.

"We had drawn a number of conclusions on the case before the inquest," he said. He added, there were reasons for keeping these findings confidential.

"For a number of reasons, we don't think it's murder, but we'll continue our investigations."

The chief said two detectives have been assigned to continue probing into the death.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre could not be reached today to comment on the suggestion that all facts known to the police had not been made known to the inquest jury.

Mrs. Beggs, an 86-year-old Saanich woman was killed "by strangulation by a cord placed around her neck by a person or persons unknown," the jury's verdict read. She was found dead in her house Sept. 3.

The jury, in the third sitting of the inquest, agreed also that death was due to asphyxia, and that no finding as to the exact time of death could reasonably be mac .

A final witness in the inquest was a Vancouver RCMP crime lab technician, Mrs. Monica Simondsen, who said she had found small quantities of blood on a dress and a piece of linoleum taken from the Beggs house.

She said the blood, which on the dress was on the right shoulder, "was of insufficient quantity to determine the group."

She further said she presumed it was human blood, although she said the possibility that it was ape or monkey blood was not ruled out.

Robert Beggs, son of the deceased woman, who found her body Sept. 3, told the jury his mother kept no pets of any kind.

'QUITE A JOB'

Coroner Jorre de St. Jorre told the jury in giving his charge to them that they had "quite a job."

He said the panel had to answer "just why that cord was around her neck — and how it came to be there."

But the coroner called "fanciful" the theory that she could have put it around her neck herself.

"There is no evidence for suicide," he said.

"And there is no evidence that points to anybody as the killer."

BONE BROKEN

A pathologist's report at an earlier hearing revealed Mrs. Beggs had a bone broken in her throat and bruising about the throat. There was also medical evidence that she had been hit or had fallen on her head.

Mrs. Beggs' body was found lying on the floor of her spare bedroom in her house at 1812 Feltham St.

A 10-ft. 2-in. electric cord was found wrapped about her neck.

While evidence was given that the woman left a large estate, it was disclosed that money on the premises was not taken.

False Claims For Benefits 'Must Stop'

A man who made seven false statements to collect unemployment insurance will wait a week in jail before being sentenced.

Carl Berikoff, 2943 Bridge Street, admitted in central court today he collected $116 in illegal benefits between April 24 and July 31 this year. In each case he had claimed he received no income when he had earned from $10 to $50 during the weeks he filed a claim.

Berikoff was remanded in custody for sentence Thursday after he pleaded guilty to all seven charges. He has since repaid the money he collected illegally.

"This is another type of offence increasing in leaps and bounds," said Magistrate Ostler. "It's got to stop."

'STUDY SUBJECT' BEFORE SPEAKING

A vice-president of the Junior Chamber of Canada Wednesday warned Victoria Jaycess that "if young people don't use their voice, they will lose it."

Russell Cooper, an Edmonton Trust Company executive and former president of the Toronto Junior Board of Trade urged that the Jaycee movement take an active and critical interest in the country's affairs.

"If young people are disappointed in what is going on around them, it is as much their fault as anyone's."

Mr. Cooper, urging a new tack for the young men's organization, said he hoped every Junior Chamber would undertake a serious study of some national problem.

He cited the research undertaken by some chambers in the past — papers on governmental sociological and economic problems.

"And if these studies are well-conceived and seriously carried out they can be presented to legislative bodies.

"God only knows, they might welcome our opinions."

But he said the rebirth of interest in national afairs will have to be acompanied by a selective and careful reading of current affairs.

"With radio, television and the papers presenting 16 sides of a question to us, we'll have to know something to begin with.

"The future," he said, "depends on it."

Late Submission Of Payroll Tax Costs Firm $300

A company which was late in forwarding employees' income tax deductions to the government was fined $300 today.

Anthony Penn, representing Penn Holdings Ltd., 625 Fort St., pleaded guilty in central court to the firm's second offence in the past 22 months.

He said the employee charged with the task had failed to remit the $148.28 by the July 15 deadline.

Four Missing Schoolgirls Found on Boat at Mill Bay

Four Victoria schoolgirls missing in an 18-foot outboard boat since dark Wednesday were located at 11:30 this morning on a beach near Mill Bay.

An Air-Sea Rescue Albatross aircraft from Comox spotted the girls' boat soon after a full-scale search of the Gulf Islands and Georgia Strait had begun.

Clare Tweedal, 17, Diane Trow, 14, Dawn McKechnie, 12, and Trudy Boye, 12, left from Hall's Boathouse Saanich Inlet, in a boat belonging to D. M. McKechnie, 3420 Veteran, the father of one of the girls, about 7 p.m.

I have a special drawer in my cupboard for bent forks. These are not just ordinary bent forks—they were twisted and curved in the process of lifting a heavy roast or bird from the roasting pan to the serving platter. I keep them there just for spite. Each one reminds me of the dandy times I used to have with meat or fowl over 10 pounds in weight. Some tell slippery tales of greasy turkeys that went sliding down the counter top to land "plop" into the sink. They almost tell of the feast that never was, but things never get quite that bad!

I found a type of rack and lifter that takes the skill out of lifting meats from the roaster. There is a wire lifting handle that is attached to the rack on both sides. When the meat is done, simply lift from the roaster. All the drippings are left in the pan for gravy, and your meat is unmarked by fork gouges.

The rack fits most pans and sells for $1.59. Don't spend your time fiddling with a heavy roast trying to get it onto the platter. Use this device instead.

There's one item that no housewife can afford to ignore when it comes to saving time. This is a boot tray that indirectly protects floors from dirt and water marks. Place this molded rubber mat by the door. It will hold a whole family of rubber boots. The bottom is ribbed, with a reinforced rim. All the rain and mud on the boots just stays in the tray and doesn't touch your floor. Put one at your front and back doors. Price is $1.99.

Some rainy days are meant for relaxing indoors. On those afternoons lunch is probably coffee or hot chocolate, with a tasty sandwich beside it. I found the ideal coffee and sandwich sets in a shop I was in today. There are four coffee mugs and sandwich plates made of ovenproof, decorative pottery. Use them for snacks or morning coffee parties. The set is priced at $5.95.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Your Ideas on Whether You Should Tell Your True Age

A couple of months ago I asked my readers to write and tell me whether or not they think a woman should tell her real age. I printed a few answers, but now I am deluged with wonderful letters. I am keeping some of them to use as kick-offs for future columns. Today I am bringing you a few quotes from these letters, and you can make up your mind — whether to tell your age or not.

Lowman

1. "Just for fun I thought I would answer your request for thoughts about whether a woman should tell her age.

"I hate to give my age to people for no good reason. I truly feel that you are as old as you feel and look, but I don't like being stuck in a particular 'slot' just because I was born in a certain year. I don't mind being ribbed about not telling my age. I would rather keep it that way. Most people think I am quite a lot younger than I am and I like to keep them guessing."

2. "I can never remember my age because it is always changing and because I really don't care how old I am. I can, however, remember the date of my birth. If anyone asks me my age, I give them my birth date. If the number of years between that date and this one are important enough to them, they can figure it out."

3. "On the subject of age; I never think of myself as young or old. If someone asks me pointblank how old I am, I tell them. I am 34 but am often mistaken for a teen-ager. I attribute this to never giving age a thought."

4. "I have just celebrated my 80th birthday and what a gay time I had! My family and friends are wonderful, and I have gotten a real thrill out of saying, yes, it is my 80th birthday! Isn't it wonderful?"

5. "On this matter of whether a woman should tell her age or not, I think it depends on the situation. If she is applying for a driver's license, or something like that of course she should tell her real age. On the other hand, if the case is not official, knock off a few years. It really doesn't matter to anyone but you. But, don't knock off more tha are believable."

6. "I am going to be a wonderful age this fall — 39. I measure my waistline, do daily dozens, dye my hair when I feel like it, and watch the styles. But — OH — I enjoy a certain serenity that is mine at this age which I longed for in my 20s. With a dream in my mind and a laugh in my heart, and some perspiration on my brow, I'll try for 80 and admit every blessed year."

I wish I could print more of these letters, but they will be sneaking into my column off and on.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, OCT. 13, 1966—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

Last year we bought a travel trailer in haste, latched it to the tail of our well - seasoned car, and scurried north into such misadventures as I wince even now to remember. This fall, though, it was a different story. The car that had failed us was thoroughly reconditioned and beefed up with overload springs. Our cargo was properly stowed at the hitch end of the trailer, where it belonged.

These precautions made the difference between a nightmare trip and a pleasant holiday, during which we got a chance to test the advantages and drawbacks of trailer vacationing as we handn't been able to before.

I'm not going to pose as an expert here. We are, in fact, still learning from experienced trailer people — a friendly fraternity always ready to help out beginners. However, in case any of you contemplate a next-year switch from tent canvas to aluminum roof, a few notes might come in handy.

Our rig is listed as a 13-footer. This is small as trailers go, expecially since three of those feet consist of tongue. A 10-foot living space approximately six wide demands certain qualities and concessions of those who pro pose to occupy it for even a night.

They must get along very well indeed with each other, and they have to be neat.

★

Trailer designers, a bunch clever as shipwrights, manage to pack an amazing lot of useful features into their rolling homes. In our three-yards-plus, we have more cupboard space than we need, under-seat lockers, fold-back upper bunk with mattress for two extra sleepers, three-burner propane stove with capacious ice box underneath, detachable table, and surprisingly roomy clothes closet.

Add to these features one propane lamp and three electrics, sink with running water from marine-type pump or tap, depending on location, also screened and curtained windows, and we ex-campers find ourselves in what seems an almost sinful state of vacation luxury.

Had we wished, we could have substituted a gas refrigerator for the ice box Some trailerites swear by these, others at them. We haven't got an oven; if a time should come when we want to spare fishing hours for roasting or baking, we'll acquire one of the clever folding ovens that sit atop a stove burner.

These are our basics, and so far we've got, along very comfortably with them.

But if you have children still of an age to go holidaying with their parents, better think of a 16 or 18-footer.

These sizes offer more space. In them, your trailer may boast a shower, and the chances are that it will have, in a tiny room of its own, a facility which is good for an argument among trailer folk any day.

★

This is a toilet. The pros point out that it's darn convenient, especially in the middle of a rainy night.

The antis insist that trailer camps, without exception, have washrooms; that in wild country all one needs is a spade and the inclination, and that trailer toilets are nothing but a nuisance.

There are also the in-betweens, who compromise with ducky little commodes.

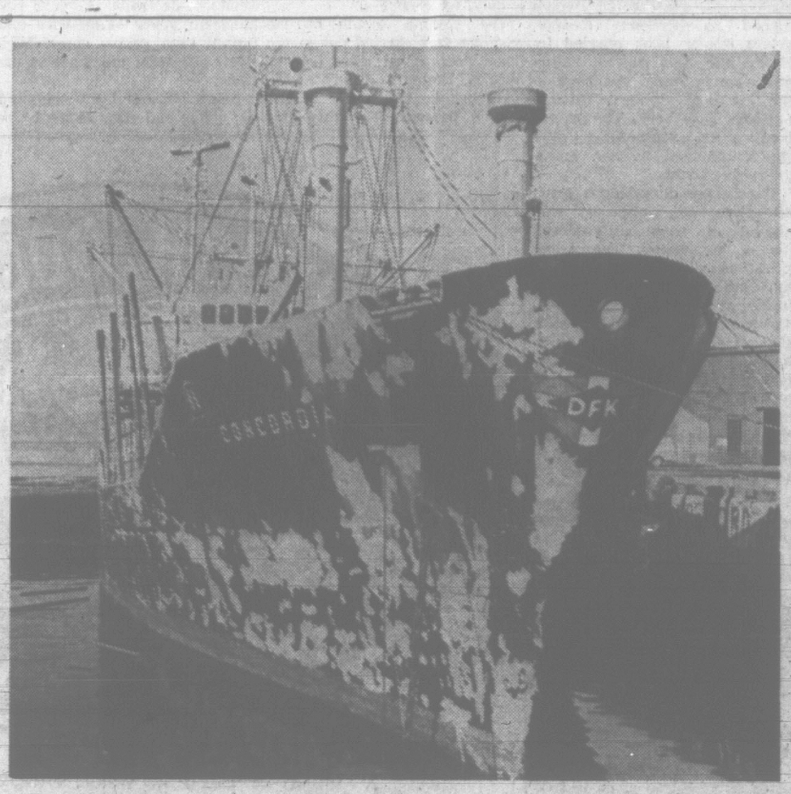

Here, I'm still too much of a greenhorn to deliver a verdict, and will only point out that one couple we met, west from Ottawa for a wander-year, have yet to initiate their trailer toilet. They use the space for storage.

Soiled clothes? Run them in to the nearest coin saundry, where you can also spin rain-soaked garments dry.

Want more warmth? Carry a clay flower pot, invert it over a burner, and you've got an effective makeshift furnace. Or you can instal a propane heater.

Propane, you'll learn, is clean and safe, and a standard bottle (that's the steel container mounted on the tongue) will last through the average two-week vacation.

For further dope, consult any of those friendly experts I mentioned . . . one or two of whom, I hope will write in.

Double Berth But Not Twins At 'Point'

Captain W. Tsoong sailed his grain ship, Concordia, into Ogden Point today — and found he'd been beaten to the gun by a wood (lumber) ship.

There, moored in the next berth, was the Concordia.

He could well be excused for thinking he'd got a case of seeing double. But he hadn't.

For the first time in Ogden Point's history, two ships with the same name had tied up on the same day.

Capt. Tsoong's ship (right) is here to load grain for Japan. Of Monrovian registry, the 8,107 gross ton vessel, was built in 1945.

The other Concordia (above) skippered by Capt. P. Haagensen, is loading lumber for Holland. Of Danish registry, she is 3,449 gross ton and was built in 1964.

A shipping agent estimated the odds of two ships with the same name tying up in the same port at the same time at a million to one against.

Lloyd's register shows six Concordias in the world.

RECALLING ISLAND-MAINLAND UNION

Nov. 20 Proclaimed Day of Thanks

The provincial cabinet today proclaimed Sunday, November 20 "as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God" to commemorate the union of Vancouver Island and Mainland British Columbia 100 years ago.

The actual union took place on a November 19, but the feature event of this Centennial year was scheduled for the nearest Sunday so that all churches could hold a common thanksgiving.

The cabinet urged that its proclamation be read to all congregations November 20 by all clergymen throughout the province because:

"It is considered to be and is deemed right and proper that the citizens of British Columbia should be afforded the opportunity humbly to render thanks to Almighty God for the generous gifts of nature and for the blessings of peace and prosperity with which their province has been so richly endowed and to combine in simultaneous prayer for the continuation of such blessings."

THIS WAS FROSTY THURSDAY

Well, nobody waved goodbye, but summer's good and gone.

Cars wore white frosting this morning and summer flowers caught a nasty chill as the thermometer nudged the freezing point.

The low overnight was 33 bitter degrees, the coldest so far this fall season.

Friday will be warmer, but —you guessed it—only after a night of rain and cloud.

Union Merger Seeks Stability For Shipyards

One Union Per Yard Aim of Negotiations

Shipyard unions and management of the three major British Columbia shipyards are moving to bring more stability to the industry.

Management efforts to have the major unions decertified for bargaining purposes appear to be in conflict with union efforts to be recertified under a joint authority.

Spokesmen for both sides agree that current applications by management and the Joint Shipyard Conference of unions before the Labor Relations Board would have the same effect.

The shipyards want the largest of some 17 shipyard trade unions decertified in favor of a single union at each yard—Yarrows, Victoria Machinery Depot and Burrard Drydock.

An application is before the LRB to this end, but the unusual move is considered by observers to have little chance of approval.

The other application, deadline for submission being Friday, seeks to have joint certification for bargaining purposes on behalf of all the shipbuilding trades.

SINGLE CONTRACT

Unions so named on a certificate would then delegate bargaining to the Joint Shipyard Conference.

All but two unions — pipefitters and electricians — have agreed to this proposal.

It is thought that management also would endorse such an arrangement to bring bargaining under more firm control.

Dick Mahoney, bargaining spokesman for the shipyards, explained:

"What we are trying to do is achieve joint bargaining policy so we don't have to face splinter groups."

HOLDOUTS

He referred to recent union holdouts that have kept shipyards closed in strike action even though a majority of other unions have accepted settlement terms.

"This is the only way it could be done from a company point of view," Mr. Mahoney said in defence of the companies' application.

He said he felt the Joint Conference submission would accomplish the same end, however.

"As long as there is the possibility of splinter strikes, they are going to destroy the shipyards in British Columbia," he said.

Andy Manson, a spokesman for the Joint Conference, said he thought the LRB hearing on its application would come by the end of this month.

But meanwhile, he said, 3½-months-old negotiations with the companies continue on the traditional basis, with the Joint Conference acting for the unions, with unions abiding by recommendations only voluntarily.

First meeting with government conciliation officer Jack Sherlock was held in Vancouver Wednesday and a further meeting in Victoria is set for Monday.

HARBOR PROJECT

Mayor Plans Bid for Aid From Ottawa

Mayor A. W. Toone said today he would make an appeal for joint Inner Harbor development when he visits Ottawa at the end of October.

He referred to improvements along the Causeway necessitated by pressure of traffic and more active use of the harbor by aircraft.

Plans for Causeway improvement to allow for expanded traffic flow and pedestrian access have been in the talking stage for several years.

The city needs senior government aid in order to initiate the project.

The mayor said he hoped to talk to federal Labor Minister John Nicholson when he visits Victoria Tuesday to address a joint Chamber of Commerce-Kiwanis Club meeting.

TO OPEN HELIPORT

Immediately following the meeting at Empress Hotel the mayor and club members will go by car and bus to Industrial Reserve overlooking the harbor for the opening by Mayor Toone of the city's new heliport.

The mayor is expected to stress the importance of transportation and harbor development in the near future when he declares the landing pad officially open.

Captial Region Planning Board director Tony Roberts will give a presentation on the site relating to the proposed Victoria West freeway system that will be linked with a bridge to James Bay.

A Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. craft will use the pad and provide chamber members with courtesy flights.

Cabinet Backs Dump Permit At Buttle Lake

Cabinet ministers appear satisfied with the Pollution Control Board's decision giving Western Mines Ltd. a permit to dump mine tailings into Buttle Lake without a public hearing first.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan this morning said he had no jurisdiction over the board so he would not comment on its action except to say he would be willing to drink the lake water on trust.

He pointed out the board's permit requires the mine to pipe its tailings into the lake at the 120-foot depth.

"I'll stand there and drink water off the surface any day of the week," he said.

MANY SAFEGUARDS

Earlier, Ray Williston, who is responsible for the pollution control board as water resources minister, said the board had detailed many requirements in the permit to ensure it was safe.

Consequently, he said, he did not see much point in the cabinet reviewing the board's decision because the ministers did not have expert knowledge.

He said neither laymen "who are steaming this up with emotion" nor cabinet ministers are in a position to tell the board's experts "that they don't know their own business."

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi expressed a similar view this week.

Murder Question Remains Open As Police, Jury Reports Conflict

Saanich police and a coroner's jury have issued contradictory reports in the death last month of Mrs. Nancy M. Beggs.

The jury Wednesday gave a verdict of murder.

But Chief W. A. Pearson today said, "We're inclined to think it's an accidental death."

He indicated that all information pertinent to the case had not been made available to the jury.

"We had drawn a number of conclusions on the case before the inquest," he said. He added, there were reasons for keeping these findings confidential.

"For a number of reasons, we don't think it's murder, but we'll continue our investigations."

The chief said two detectives have been assigned to continue probing into the death.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre could not be reached today to comment on the suggestion that all facts known to the police had not been made known to the inquest jury.

Mrs. Beggs, an 86-year-old Saanich woman was killed "by strangulation by a cord placed around her neck by a person or persons unknown," the jury's verdict read. She was found dead in her house Sept. 3.

The jury, in the third sitting of the inquest, agreed also that death was due to asphyxia, and that no finding as to the exact time of death could reasonably be made.

A final witness in the inquest was a Vancouver RCMP crime lab technician, Mrs. Monica Simondsen, who said she had found small quantities of blood on a dress and a piece of linoleum taken from the Beggs house.

She said the blood, which on the dress was on the right shoulder, "was of insufficient quantity to determine the group."

She further said she presumed it was human blood, although she said the possibility that it was ape or monkey blood was not ruled out.

Robert Beggs, son of the deceased woman, who found her body Sept. 3, told the jury his mother kept no pets of any kind.

'QUITE A JOB'

Coroner Jorre de St. Jorre told the jury in giving his charge to them that they had "quite a job."

He said the panel had to answer "just why that cord was around her neck — and how it came to be there."

But the coroner called "fanciful" the theory that she could have put it around her neck herself.

"There is no evidence for suicide," he said.

"And there is no evidence that points to anybody as the killer."

BONE BROKEN

A pathologist's report at an earlier hearing revealed Mrs. Beggs had a bone broken in her throat and bruising about the throat. There was also medical evidence that she had been hit or had fallen on her head.

Mrs. Beggs' body was found lying on the floor of her spare bedroom in her house at 1812 Feltham St.

A 10-ft. 2-in. electric cord was found wrapped about her neck.

While evidence was given that the woman left a large estate, it was disclosed that money on the premises was not taken.

False Claims For Benefits 'Must Stop'

A man who made seven false statements to collect unemployment insurance will wait a week in jail before being sentenced.

Carl Berikoff, 2943 Bridge Street, admitted in central court today he collected $116 in illegal benefits between April 24 and July 31 this year. In each case he had claimed he received no income when he had earned from $10 to $50 during the weeks he filed a claim.

Berikoff was remanded in custody for sentence Thursday after he pleaded guilty to all seven charges. He has since repaid the money he collected illegally.

"This is another type of offence increasing in leaps and bounds," said Magistrate Ostler. "It's got to stop."

Late Submission Of Payroll Tax Costs Firm $300

A company which was late in forwarding employees' income tax deductions to the government was fined $300 today.

Anthony Penn, representing Penn Holdings Ltd., 625 Fort St., pleaded guilty in central court to the firm's second offence in the past 22 months.

He said the employee charged with the task had failed to remit the $148.28 by the July 15 deadline.

'STUDY SUBJECT' BEFORE SPEAKING

A vice-president of the Junior Chamber of Canada Wednesday warned Victoria Jaycees that "if young people don't use their voice, they will lose it."

Russell Cooper, an Edmonton Trust Company executive and former president of the Toronto Junior Board of Trade urged that the Jaycee movement take an active and critical interest in the country's affairs.

"If young people are disappointed in what is going on around them, it is as much their fault as anyone's."

Mr. Cooper, urging a new tack for the young men's organization, said he hoped every Junior Chamber would undertake a serious study of some national problem.

He cited the research undertaken by some chambers in the past — papers on governmental sociological and economic problems.

"And if these studies are well-conceived and seriously carried out they can be presented to legislative bodies.

"God only knows, they might welcome our opinions."

But he said the rebirth of interest in national affairs will have to be accompanied by a selective and careful reading of current affairs.

"With radio, television and the papers presenting 16 sides of a question to us, we'll have to know something to begin with.

"The future," he said, "depends on it."

Four Missing Schoolgirls Found on Boat at Mill Bay

Four Victoria schoolgirls missing in an 18-foot outboard boat since dark Wednesday were located at 11:30 this morning on a beach near Mill Bay.

An Air-Sea Rescue Albatross aircraft from Comox spotted the girls' boat soon after a full-scale search of the Gulf Islands and Georgia Strait had begun.

Clare Tweedal, 17, Diane Trow, 14, Dawn McKechnie, 12, and Trudy Boye, 12, left from Hall's Boathouse Saanich Inlet, in a boat belonging to D. M. McKechnie, 3420 Veteran, the father of one of the girls, about 7 p.m.

GIVING time and energy to help others are these newly-elected Junior Red Cross executives. They'll plan activities of school clubs, organize spare-time hospital helpers, collect for Christmas hampers and for needy children overseas. From left are Maxine Boyd, publicity, Oak Bay Senior Secondary; Mary Bigelow, publicity, Norfolk House; Lynne Ingram, treasurer, S. J. Willis; Dan McGregor, president, Mount View; Ann Hellyer, secretary, S. J. Willis, and Adrienne Chan, vice-president, Victoria Senior Secondary. Busy year of activities is planned. Rail Union Shrugs Off Sell Threats

Striking Pacific Great Eastern Railway workers today shrugged off "threats" the line would be sold as old hat and countered they wanted a face-to-face meeting with the threateners for some serious negotiating.

Fred Richmond, chairman of the five-union federation of PGE employees which pulled its 400 non-operating tradesmen off the line 18 days ago, said the union never has asked more than the 50-cents-hourly wage increase spread over two years as recommended by a conciliation board and offered by management.

He said the union struck to obtain government acceptance of the new principle proposed by conciliation chairman Les Bewley, a Vancouver magistrate, that PGE tradesmen not be tied to their counterparts in the national railways but be compared with other B.C. tradesmen.

FRINGE BENEFITS

"Our committee met this morning and decided to ask for face-to-face meetings at the top level — Bennett, Gunderson and Williston — for serious and earnest negotiations on the fringe benefits proposed in the Bewley report," Mr. Richmond said.

"This top management has never negotiated with us. We've just had Joe Broadbent (PGE general-manager) on the other side of the table and it's obvious he has no power to make decisions."

The union planned to transmit its proposal later today but at press time there was an unconfirmed report that Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, in Vancouver, had met a union spokesman and had given an undertaking to set up a meeting between the top union and management representatives.

Mr. Richmond said suggestions by Premier Bennett, PGE president, and directors Einar Gunderson and Forests Minister Williston Wednesday that the PGE might have to be sold by the province if the strike continues were just manoeuvres by the management.

"These threats were made before at the bargaining table. We didn't take them seriously then and we don't take them seriously now. Who would buy a rail line that was tied up by a strike?"

He said a suggestion by Mr. Williston that the federation was acting as a secret tool of the

'FINAL OFFER' SENT BY U.K. TO SMITH

LONDON (AP)—The British government today approved a "final offer" to Premier Ian Smith, giving him six weeks to end the Rhodesian rebellion or face harsh compulsory sanctions under the United Nations.

Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden told reporters after a British cabinet meeting that Sir Morrice James, a high official of the Comommwealth relations office, will fly to Salisbury tonight with the government's minimum terms for a settlement.

Province-Wide Manhunt in Que.

MONTREAL (CP)—A province-wide manhunt was under way as police of four forces sought thieves who stole $1,000,000 in cash from the mailroom at Montreal International Airport early today.

Montreal district postmaster Hector Cormier said departmental investigators are investigating the possibility of an "inside job".

Police squads raced to a north-end Montreal building nine miles due east of the airport on a tip that some of the mailbags had been found. They said later they had found only one cloth mailbag which did not seem to be connected with the robbery.

The police, from the RCMP, Montreal city and suburban Dorval forces, found the bag at the rear of a house on St. Lawrence Boulevard. Provincial police sent out a province-wide alert but said no description of the daring robbers was immediately available.

A Post Office official said the mailroom at the airport is "difficult to get at" and normally guarded.

"Whoever did the job certainly must have known his way around," said a post office security official, who added there are "some good leads."

The robbery occurred in the airport's mailroom when thieves slashed their way through a heavy wire mesh to steal 15 bags believed to contain bills in various denominations.

RCMP and post office investigators and Dorval police set up roadblocks and were searching all cars leaving the airport.

Post office officials said the amount of the loss probably was "considerable" but an exact accounting could not be made until reports of shipments were obtained from the banks who had sent money through the airport Wednesday night and today.

A Provincial Police spokesman said it was estimated that about $1,000,000 in cash had been taken.

The stolen mailbags were made of heavy leather and each measured 10 by 12 inches. In addition to the 15 small bags weighing 10 pounds each, police said two 30-pound bags probably containing regular mail were taken.

EMPLOYEES ON LUNCH

The theft was believed to have occurred between 4 a.m. and 4:43 a.m. while mailroom employees were on a meal break.

Post office investigators said the mailroom was "difficult to get at and normally was guarded."

It was not immediately known if guards were posted at the time of the robbery.

It was believed that the bags were delivered to the airport Thursday night in an armored car and were destined to be sent to bank branches in various parts of the province today.

Hints Tax Hike

MONTREAL (CP) — An increase of "a few per cent" in the public revenue share of the gross national product may be needed over the next few years, Finance Minister Sharp said today. He told a meeting of the National Industrial Conference Board this move would involve "some restraint on the expansion of private expenditures."

Man Deported

EDMONTON (CP)—Samuel Mannarino, alias Salvatori Ruggieri, 60, of New Kensington, Penn., has left for Las Vegas by plane after being ordered deported from Canada. The RCMP took Mannarino into custory in northwestern Alberta after he had been in Canada five weeks on a hunting trip with four other United States residents. S. N. Empson, district immigration officer in Edmonton, said "because of his previous criminal convictions in the United States, he was in the prohibited class from entering Canada."

More Boycotts

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters) — The Boycott of Israel Office here has issued a communique banning dealings with a Swiss company and 81 subsidiaries of various Canadian, American, Japanese, French and Turkish companies with which dealings had earlier been banned for violating the boycott regulations.

Tory Ready to Stake Seat On Charge Against Hellyer

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservatives Wednesday called for the resignation of Defence Minister Hellyer charging that he tampered with a report by Rear-Admiral William Landymore.

The charge was made by Terrence Nugent (PC—Edmonton, Strathcona) who said he was prepared to stake his seat on its accuracy.

He said in the House of Commons that the minister tampered with testimony prepared for the defence committee by Landymore, who was later dismissed from service.

Mr. Hellyer described the accusations as a "slanderous insinuation."

Outside the Commons, he told reporters he thought the move was "just an attempt on the part of some desperate people to try to smear my reputation."

He repeated that some changes had been made in Admiral Landymore's testimony but said there was no evidence at the time that the admiral was anything but pleased with the result.

Asked if he thought Admiral Landymore was aligning himself with the Conservatives, Mr. Hellyer replied:

"Yes, there's a very close relationship between the admiral and others and the Conservative party in a desperate attempt to destroy me. . . ."

MOTION DISALLOWED

Inside the Commons, Mr. Nugent's motion to charge the minister with breach of privileges was disallowed by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, but the opposition continued to press the attack.

After more than two hours of charges and procedural wrangling, the hassle was still not over. Continued debate today seemed likely after the Speaker suggested that Mr. Nugent meet him to discuss a rephrased motion.

Mr. Nugent said he had obtained a sworn affidavit from Admiral Landymore saying his testimony was altered during the time it was in Mr. Hellyer's office before the committee sitting.

The debate brought out some cutting language directed at Mr. Hellyer.

"Lied to the House," Lloyd R. Crouse (PC — Queens - Lunenburg) interjected at one point.

"Another Profumo," added Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) in a reference to the British war minister who resigned after admitting that he had lied to the House about his relationship with playgirl Christine Keeler.

Mr. Nugent's first motion was ruled out by the Speaker on the grounds that his case did not meet House rules about raising his point at the earlier opportunity.

The question of Admiral Landymore's testimony before the Commons defence committee last June had been raised before, the Speaker said.

Mr. Nugent said he had obtained a sworn statement from Admiral Landymore only during the weekend. He had presented his point of privilege Wednesday after a careful investigation and with due regard to the seriousness of the matter.

Mr. Nugent said he had an affidavit from Admiral Landymore that the admiral had gone to Mr. Hellyer's office before his committee appearance. He gave his brief orally and was asked to leave a copy with the defence minister.

The brief later was returned to the admiral with four pages deleted and two others substituted, Mr. Nugent said.

DIDN'T CONSENT

Admiral Landymore hadn't consented to the changes in his brief, which dealt with the personnel situation in the Maritime Command, Mr. Nugent said.

When Admiral Landymore was fired last July, Mr. Hellyer said the text of the admiral's presentation to the defence committee had been altered. This was because he had tried to bring before the committee matters outside his authority—personnel figures in the Maritime Command he headed.

This became a key issue in the debate when Mr. Hellyer demanded that Mr. Nugent in-

ALL TESTIMONY 'NOW IN DOUBT'

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative Terry Nugent said in the Commons today the testimony of every witness to the summer sessions of the defence committee must be in "very serious doubt."

The MP for Edmonton-Strathcona said all these witnesses, including Rear-Admiral William Landymore, should be called before the Commons privileges committee to testify on his charge that Defence Minister Hellyer "tampered" with the evidence of the admiral.

The privileges committee should look into the practices and procedures governing testimony by witnesses so that government officials would understand the limitations of ministerial authority.

At the House opening today, Mr. Nugent said Mr. Hellyer's accusation that his charge is spurious impugns his honor and integrity.

NORTH AMERICA ONLY BUFFER REMAINING

W.H.O. Warns of Hunger Crisis

ROME (CP)—The world food situation is more precarious now than at any time since the Second World War, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization said in its annual report published today.

The FAO said that in 1965-66 the world population increased by about 70,000,000 people but there was an average of two per cent less food for everyone.

This raised fears that the gap between population and food production would increase and that mankind is moving deeper into its worst hunger crisis.

"Any remaining complacency about the food and agriculture situation must surely have been dispelled by the events of the past years," said Director-General B. R. Sen of India.

"But for good harvests in North America, world production would almost certainly have declined. In fact, in each of the developing regions except the Near East, food production is estimated to have fallen by two per cent in total and four to five per cent on a per-capita basis.

"The poor harvests ot 1965-66 are all the more serious since they come, not in the midst of plenty, but after a long period in which production has only barely kept up with the rapidly mounting population.

"When millions of people are already inadequately nourished there is little if any margin against the effects of a bad season."

Until recently, large stocks of grain accumulated since the early 1950s, mainly in North America, provided a cushion against emergencies.

Big shipments of these stocks helped avert disaster in India and other drought - stricken areas during the last year.

But these stocks have dropped to their lowest level in more than a decade, due to shipments to famine areas, big imports by China and Russia and successful efforts by the United States to limit production.

"Thus," Dr. Sen said, "the world food situation is now more precarious than at any time since the period of acute shortage immediately after the Second World War. Because of the depletion of stocks the world has become much more dependent on current production, and hence on weather conditions.

"It is therefore with some anxiety that we wait the outcome of the 1966-67 harvests."

Looks like th' PGE trains may run in time, but fer a time they won't run on it.

By HAL MALONE

FIRST RACE — Cuthbertson gets the task of trying to keep Lees Time on the rail. Her speed makes her a danger. Milord of Kent, Penihawk and Aban shouldn't be far away. It may be significant that Aban broke her maiden from the outside post. Able Lea is the danger late. If Please Papa gets in the plot thickens. . . . ABAN, Penihawk, Milord of Kent.

SECOND RACE—Yes Sam has shown some zip sprinting but he doesn't act as if he wants to go this far. They took Keno Kid to the front last time and he held sway until the stretch. My Imagination gets a long way out of it and needs zestful handling. Centennial Su belongs and Shields hustles them. Chase can handle the trip. If Flying Phillip takes to the distance he should be heard from. In a scramble . . . FLYING PHILLIP, Keno Kid, My Imagination.

THIRD RACE—Nearly everything in here is partial to an off track but a drying out track which seems likely poses problems. Aleja goes from the extreme outside to the rail and it might take a pretty fair horse to head her. Daily Mail and Shodan can ramble and the latter can come from just off the pace. Dark Bug probably will try for good position (and depend on Shields' steering) to get on the board. Highdorn benefits from a speed duel and switches to Trejos who finishes well. . . . ALEJA, Shodan, Highdorn.

FOURTH RACE—Sir Runnymede gets to the races so seldom it's easy to forget that he used to scamp successfully with $5,000 stock. If his wheels hold up, it's goodbye Charlie. Without him Malheur Kitten and Orista would likely argue for the lead, but neither are overburdened with courage in the stretch. Miss Ky Lea's form doesn't show it but she used to like a soft track. Famous Bayboy gets well out of it early but he's got a bold rush. If Lord Highland gets in the frontrunners will known they're in a horse race. . . . SIR RUNNYMEDE, Famous Bayboy, Smoke Call.

FIFTH RACE—Royal Kimbo seems to be coming up to a race. He showed good speed in the slop and hung on better.

RUSSIA SAYS:

Chinese Prevent Red Win

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin charged today that China has prevented world communism from putting "a quick end" to United States military actions in Viet Nam.

Speaking to a Soviet - Polish friendship meeting in Sverdlovsk in the Urals, Kosygin said:

"Had American imperialism encountered the joint rebuff of all countries of socialism . . . it is doubtless that a quick end would have been put to its outrages in Viet Nam.

"China's position has become a serious obstacle in the struggle for this sacred cause."

Kosygin disputed claims by Peking that the Russians were helping U.S. policy in Viet Nam and giving Hanoi only half-hearted support.

Boasting of Soviet economic strength, Kosygin said the nation had "a big harvest" this year "and the output of animal husbandry has sharply increased."

Western sources said economic strength was a major factor in Soviet ability to provide large amounts of military and economic aid to countries such as North Viet Nam in moves to win over their allegiance in the feud with Peking.

Soviet-Chinese relations have steadily worsened in the last two months.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda today called the cultural revolution "a political purge."

SEE EXPULSION MOVE

In Washington Kosygin's slashing attack on China was viewed as evidence that the Soviet leadership would like to read the Chinese Communists entirely out of the Soviet-led world Communist movement.

Washington experts considered it significant that Kosygin made his sensational charges on the occasion of a top-level Polish visit to the Soviet Union. Poland's support would be important. Generally Eastern European Communist countries have opposed expulsion of the Chinese from the Soviet - led world Communist movement for two reasons: First, the precedent of extreme denunciation might be used against any one of them at some future time; second, the European Communist countries have used the Sino-Soviet split to gain for themselves more room to manoeuvre.

Mid-East Feud Taken To UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The threat of a new Middle East crisis confronted the United Nations today as Israel charged Syria with murders, sabotage and open incitement to war.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban called for an emergency meeting of the Security Council. The 15-nation council was expected to meet Friday.

Israel went to the council after a long series of incidents along the Syrian-Israeli border which the Israelis blame on a sabotage organization based in Syria. Saturday a land mine explosion killed four Israeli policemen and injured two.

The Syrian government has disclaimed responsibility for the raids, which are the work of a group of Palestine Arab refugees, known as el - Assefa (storm) or el-Fatah (conquest). In retaliation, Israeli planes attacked a Syrian engineering project north of the Sea of Galilee in July.

NEW HONOR FOR PHILIP

LONDON (Reuters)—Prince Philip heads the list of "top 10 non-smokers of the year" chosen by the British Society of Non-Smokers.

Hi-Ma-Dan picks up five pounds but still is one to fear. Waraway has fair speed but it's hard to see him drawing clear. Inner Guard has been ineffective but his best puts him right there. Summit Talk belongs, but he's had a heavy schedule. If Abram gets in, look out. He had a few traffic problems in his last and figures to be closer. . . . ROYAL KIMBO, Hi-Ma-Dan, Abram.

SIXTH RACE — Stromaway may have a slight class edge and with two races over the track should be about ready. Some Royal Flush will probably head for the lead; how far he holds it depends on how much pressure he gets. Wallaroo obviously likes it soft but hasn't been out of the barn since his big win a month ago. It may be significant that Milne who has won four on Commander Joe switches to Wallaroo. Rough Road has a look. The main danger from behind is Old Boag. He was flying the last eighth in his most recent. . . . STROMAWAY, Old Boag, Wallaroo.

SEVENTH RACE — We look for a smasher of a speed duel here. Eastern Jewel, Ky Winner and Yankee Mac are all heavyweights in cutting corners. Ky Winner's Derby half in 46.4 was the second fastest half of the meet and he may well turn out to be the best claim of the season. Yankee Mac led Jolly Pop to the stretch which solidifies his credentials as a flyer. If they knock one another off, Nickonaches who sheds five pounds and gets Arnold and Mystic Flash who adds three could capitalize late. Santa Teresa drops three is not altogether an outsider. . . . NICKONACHES, Ky Winner, Yankee Mac.

Minor Had 5 Beers

Stephen Majorki, 19, of 3114 Alder St., was fined $35 in court today when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor.

He was charged after police found five bottles of beer in his car when they stopped it on Douglas Street Sept. 28. Majorki admitted ownership of the beer.

Russians Coming?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson said today he had invited leaders of the Soviet Union to come to the United States. He said he told Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko this week that the Russian "leadership" would be welcome to visit this country.

Zone Hit Again

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. B25 strategic bombers, smaller jets and ships of the 7th fleet carried out heavy strikes against communist forces in the demilitarized zone today as Defence Secretary Robert McNamara toured areas just south of the zone.

Bennett Denies Story On German Investment

Premier Bennett today denied that he called last month's election so that a European industrial cartel would invest $2 billion in B.C. including development of a steel-making complex.

The suggestion was made by well-known Lillooet weekly newspaper publisher Margaret "Ma" Murray in the current edition of her publication.

Mr. Bennett, in an interview in New Burnswick on his return from a European tour, said there is "no truth in any shape or form" to the story.

"There was no such arrangement and no such reason," he said. "Time will show that to be a fact."

Mrs. Murray said her information is based on the finding of one-time German economics professor H. T. Millyard who now lives in Lillooet and still receives German news.

She said the European cartel wanted to base its development here because of hydroelectric power and planned to make the money available through Swiss banks.

But it demanded that the premier call an election so that it would be sure it did not have to contend with a Socialist government during the formative years.

Mrs. Murray said Willy Messerschmit, famed German aircraft designer who recently visited Western Canada including several days in B.C., was the cartel's chief emmissary to Bennett.

The Lillooet publisher claimed that Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Loffmark's visit to Germany last spring and Premier Bennett's post-election trip to Germany and Switzerland bolstered the theory.

She was vague about the way the money would be invested saying only that $600 million would be spent on pre-fabricated buildings and houses, $400 million on the steel plant and the rest split in smaller projects.

. . . PGE FOR SALE?

national railway unions to lever a higher settlement for all was "just plain ridiculous."

Mr. Richmond said the whole point of the strike was to finally divorce PGE workers from automatically being tied to the agreements won by the national unions — the reason the federation was formed two years ago.

He said the federation was so determined to obtain consideration as B.C. workers that it would not ask more than the 50-cents boost even if the national unions eventually won a higher amount.

Premier Bennett earlier said the PGE would pay the 50 cents or a national settlement, whichever was higher.

Mr. Richmond said the federation wants to open serious negotiations on the fringe benefit improvements recommended by the Bewley report:

Cumulative sick leave of one day a month up to a maximum of 120 days; equal sharing of the monthly costs of the present health and welfare benefits (employees now pay $6.07 and the railway adds $5.01) and expansion of the benefits; doubling of group life insurance to $3,000; and addition of one statutory holiday to bring the total to eight a year.

The suggestions of selling the line were made with varying degrees of firmness Wednesday.

Mr. Gunderson started it by saying the simplest way to deal with the strike "might be sell the ruddy thing."

BACK-PADDLED

But, after reports that U.S. railways and their unions would like to see such a sale, Mr. Gunderson back-pedalled.

In his second statement, Mr. Gunderson emphasized he was "not advocating the sale of the PGE — it's been a great asset to B.C."

"My point was that if the PGE were sold, the employees would get the same as was paid the workers on other railways."

Mr. Bennett, contacted in New Brunswick, reiterated an appeal that the men return to work and said the Crown company would not change its settlement offer.

Commenting on Mr. Gunderson's sale suggestion, he said:

"I hope it wouldn't have to go that far. I would hate to think so, but it is in the hands of the union."

(The premier only last month confirmed he was still serious about his suggestion that the PGE buy the Canadian National Railway's trunk line from Prince George to Prince Rupert and that he would never sell the PGE because it is the B.C. government's chief instrument for controlling provincial development.)

Mr. Williston said this morning he was "dead serious" in his suggestion that the province might be forced to sell the line.

"That would be a last resort and the last thing I would think of, admittedly, but there is some point beyond which we can't go (in a settlement with employees)."

Two Railway Chiefs Show PGE Interest

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two railway presidents expressed interest today in Premier Bennett's suggested sale of the Pacific Great Eastern railway if a strike by non-operating employees does not end soon.

Ian Sinclair of the Canadian Pacific Railway said in a telephone interview from Montreal:

"If they (the PGE) want to put down a price and send it along, we would look at it and study it."

Asked how interested the CPR would be in buying the PGE, Mr. Sinclair said:

"You don't just buy a railway over the telephone. The CPR has always helped B.C. and will continue to do so.

Paul Budd of the Great Northern Railway said in a telephone interview from St. Paul, Minn.:

"We would take a look at the PGE if the B.C. government is interested in putting up the property for sale."

Mr. Budd said he does not "know the PGE as well as I should," but his people in the field would be able to inform him of the details of the 790-mile line from North Vancouver into the Peace River country.

cluded the word "improperly" in his statement about the minister "tampering" with evidence to go before the committee.

He wanted the matter to go before the defence committee when legislation enabling unification of the forces was presented this fall. If that wouldn't do, then he was willing to have the standing committee on privileges and elections look into it.

". . . I want to clear my name which is more precious to me than anything."

But he wanted the word "tampering" defined because it could mean almost anything, including scratching someone's back.

Mr. Nugent said Commons' rules are clear. They stipulated that tampering with evidence a witness would present before a Commons committee is a breach of MPs' privileges.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) and Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) backed Mr. Nugent to the hilt.

Mr. Forrestall said he associated himself with Mr. Nugent in the move against Mr. Hellyer. Mr. Churchill said he would move today for a charge against Mr. Hellyer if some way were found to get around the Wednesday conflict of opinion.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A vigorous storm that moved across the Gulf of Alasak Wednesday night brought rain and gales to the northern coast of B.C. today. Although considerable sunshine will precede the system elsewhere in the province rain will spread gradually down the coast during the day, while a combination of rain and snow is expected from it as it moves through the northern interior. Meanwhile, the southern interior should not be affected until tonight. Cool Pacific air will follow the disturbance so that cloudy skies and showers are in store for all regions on Friday.

H-Bomb Reaction Cancer Cure?

LONDON (Reuters) — A British hospital plans to use a hydrogen bomb-type nuclear reaction in experimental treatment of cancer, it was disclosed today.

Beams of high energy neutrons, produced in a British-developed vacuum tube, will be used at the Christie Hospital in Manchester.

This new radiation device using neutrons has been developed at a defence ministry electronics research laboratory and will be tested to see whether it is more effective than X-rays in treatment of many forms of cancer.

The laboratory is said to have a world lead in this field of research. The cancer research project chief, James Wood, told reporters at the laboratory:

"We cannot say definitely whether it will be a cure yet, but it looks like a 50-50 bet. It will take about three years to develop a neutron generating tube with the high power output that is required."

COURT UPHOLDS LAW

NEW YORK (AP) — The Second United States Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld the constitutionality of a law making it a crime to destroy a draft card.

In a unanimous decision, the first ruling on the law, the court affirmed the conviction of David J. Miller, 24, of Voluntown, Conn.

Miller burned what he said was his draft card at a street rally here October 15, 1965, as a "symbolic protest" against United States involvement in the war in Viet Nam.
